I. Preface

For more than 20 years the Institute of European Sport Development and Leisure Studies offers the framework for academic research on sport politics and leisure studies at German Sport University Cologne. Since 2011 the focus on European sport studies has been deepened with the newly established Jean Monnet Chair.

Based on the support of the European Commission a couple of projects – for instance the AEI conference 2012, the Sport&EU conference 2014 and the series of “Jean Monnet Lectures on Sport politics” – have already been realised while other projects are still in progress. The team of the institute is working eagerly to accomplish further projects – in particular the Master program on “International Sport Development and Politics” as well as the new publications series.

This annual report – covering the period from summer 2014 to summer 2015 – introduces the reader to new activities. Amongst others the HOMER project has been launched jointly with three other Jean Monnet Chairs (at the University of Cologne and the University of Maastricht). This teaching project seeks to identify narratives of European integration with regard to the activities of the European Council.

A particular highlight of the last months has been the talk given by the President of the European Parliament Martin Schulz at German Sport University during the grading ceremony of the HOMER project. The public debate on sport and development policy during this year’s European week in May 2015 has also raised the attention of students at the university and the citizen of Cologne alike.

The readers are kindly invited to have a closer look at these and other activities in this fourth edition of the Jean Monnet report. Questions, proposals and critical comments are highly appreciated and may be addressed to the Jean Monnet Chair (iesf@dshs-koeln.de).

II. Leitbild/Mission of the Institute

The German Sport University Cologne (GSU) is Germany's most important academic centre of teaching and research in physical education and sport science and one of the largest specialised universities world-wide. With 21 academic departments it covers a wide range of sport science in teaching and research. More than 30 sports are taught in theory and practice in modern facilities. Around 5,500 students, including 350 foreign students, are studying at the GSU, which offers academic Bachelor's and Master's degrees, teaching certificates for various school levels and a doctoral degree. The Institute of European Sport Development and Leisure Studies and its Jean Monnet Chair work towards contributing to the European dimension of sport in particular and to the international development of sport structures in general.

The ongoing interdependence of sport and other societal fields, the increasing economic power of sport, the growing influence of governmental and non-governmental actors on the organisation of sport, its framework, and the continuing Europeanisation and globalisation have increased the importance of sport politics. However, the development of a political science inspired approach to sport and the formation of a particular branch addressing the broad range of sport-related political issues are still at the very beginning.

Against this background, activities of the IESF aim to cooperate with national and international academics in order to bring together findings from political, social, and sport sciences. The overall goal is to illustrate the specific core of sport political action by taking into account the three dimensions polity (structural-institutional), politics (procedural) and policy (content-related). For all dimensions, it is important not only to consider the horizontal differentiation between regional autonomy and governmental regulation, but also the vertical differentiation between local, regional, national, European, and international levels, to meet the needs of a sport political multi-level system. This view is mirrored in the two main research areas of the Institute: national, European, and international sport systems and politics and the role of sport in international development cooperation.

III. Teaching Activities

The Institute of European Sport Development and Leisure Studies (IESF) is engaged in the teaching of various mandatory courses in the following study programmes of the German Sport University Cologne (GSU):

B.A. in Sport, Outdoor Education and Physical Activity

Objectives: Students are taught to plan and carry out physical activities in nature sports/sport tourism, in leisure sports/ popular sports, and in dance/movement/creativity. In compulsory elective courses, students can deepen their knowledge about sport politics and the European dimension of sport.

M.Sc. in Sport Tourism and Recreation Management

Compulsory Elective (Profilergänzung): International Sport Politics and Sport in Development

Objectives:

Students acquire basic knowledge about sport political structures and actors. Special attention is paid to the international surroundings of sport and the role of sport in development work.

Certificate in European Sport Studies

Further qualification comprised of

1. Project funding and European project management
2. European lobbying
3. Field Trip to Brussels

Jean Monnet Lectures

In addition to these mandatory courses the IESF has established a series of public lectures dedicated in particular to the political system of the EU, its history, institutions and procedures as to the topic of sport. The specific focus of these lectures is the linkage of the EU multi-level system and sport politics. All lectures are open for the public.

Education Certificate Studies: Foreign Relation Experts for Sport

Objectives: students get to know the international sport sponsoring & projects of the Federal Foreign Office and the DOSB as well as German and foreign sport systems and acquire the knowledge about the planning, financing and evaluation of projects abroad.

Additionally, the students acquire general competences and knowledge for stays abroad in the working field of „sport and development cooperation“.

Field Trip Brussels 2015:

European Sports Politics in Practice was the title of a two-day field-trip that took 27 students to Brussels in April 2015. It was organised and supervised by Till Müller-Schoell. The students visited many of the key institutions and sports interest groups located in Brussels and were able to interact with staff from organisations such as the European Commission, the European Parliament, the European Olympic Committees and the EU Athletes Association. The experience allowed for the group to see politics firsthand and to grasp the greater, more formalised role sports is taking on the European stage. European politics became more than just names, dates and institutions.

III.4 Specialized Teaching Project: HOMER

HOMER has a transnational impact since it brings together the German Sport University Cologne (GSU), the University of Cologne, and the University of Maastricht as a Jean Monnet Center of Excellence.

HOMER is a six step research-based teaching program that seeks to identify narratives, focusing on three history making summits of national leaders in the history of European integration.

HOMER's background:

The future of the European Union will increasingly be shaped by the perception of its history and an evolving European memory culture. Against this backdrop, it is necessary to pay more attention to the European Council which has been the key institution in terms of history making decisions.

The project will address three critical junctures in order to analyse their impact on the development of European narratives:

The almost forgotten 1969 summit of The Hague was central to the emergence of the EU and the European Council as an entity. The Maastricht summit of 1991 was a history-making act for the deepening of European integration. The 2009 summit of Lisbon opened a new age for the construction of the EU. The project will assess these summits and analyse their roles in developing a 'master narrative' of European integration. The main rationale of the project is to contribute to the evolving European memory culture by scrutinizing past and existing interpretations while simultaneously building on these.

The general structure of HOMER is based on an annual six step-approach:

- a yearly workshop in Brussels (research, dialogue and event dimension)
- a yearly joint seminar (teaching dimension)
- a yearly online module (internat. dissemination) linked with the respective workshop and seminar
- a series of four annual public lectures (two at each university; local/regional dissemination)
- four annual issues of a newsletter and a regularly updated homepage
- a final journal article at the end of the third year.

Each year one of the three summits will be tackled by HOMER:

- first year: the summit of The Hague 1969 (Summer term 2015)
- second year: the European Council taking place in Maastricht 1991 (Winter term 2015/2016)
- third year: the Lisbon summit 2009 that opened a new age for the construction of the EU and generally for Europe (Winter term 2016).

III.5 Work on future Master Program Sport Development and Politics

Head of the Project:

Prof. Dr. Jürgen Mittag, Prof. Dr. Stephan Wassong

Researchers involved:

Dr. Jörg Krieger, Dr. Ansgar Molzberger, Dr. Till Müller-Schoell, Dr. Karen Petry

Period of Activity

seit 2011

Content:

In order to deepen the teaching profile of German Sport University Cologne in both its social science dimension and its European/International scope and to ensure a higher degree of compatibility with the B.A. Sport, Outdoor Education and Movement a core team of academics from the Institute of Sport Development and Leisure Studies and the Institute of Sport History has started in 2011 to develop an specialised interdisciplinary and international M.A. program at German Sport University.

The master program "International Sport Development and Politics" covers the fields of social sciences and humanities in sport. The M.A. will strive to interlink with other master programs at the GSU, especially the M.Sc. Sport Management, which focuses on economic aspects of sport, while the M.A. Sport Development will concentrate on the collision of interests, values and negotiation in interaction with institutions, which lead to aims, perception of specific problems and their solutions and innovative policies on national and international levels of sport.

The overall aim of the M.A. Sport Development is to develop a program with a multidisciplinary and international approach. Students will acquire basic knowledge and methods for understanding and analysing processes in the German, European and international sport context, especially considering the social and political changes and developments. In particular by following a comparative approach at the European and global level, the M.A. program wants to deepen the knowledge that sport has become a complex international system of structures.

In order to meet the requirements of an international area of sport in research and practice, the program will provide an international surrounding, both considering the composition of students and the language, thematic focus and international exchanges and internships. Therefore, all courses will be taught in English, which accounts for the master thesis as well. This will give students the opportunity to practice a foreign language in a specialised field of work and thus enable them to work within international areas in the future. The M.A. has a research oriented focus, which will enable the students to participate in scientific research and practice. Students will be taught systematic, analytic and theoretical approaches to political and social aspects within the area of sport, as well as methods of empirical research and hermeneutics.

The program will be taught in four semesters with a workload of 120 CPs. Conceptionally, thematic and methodic courses will be combined in order to ensure a systematic development of knowledge. The first two semesters will focus on the provision of knowledge in lectures and seminars, whereas the third and fourth semester will concentrate on the scientific deepening of this knowledge and the connection to current areas of research and work. The main focus of the third semester will be a research- and project-seminar with an additional internship or practical training. This seminar will also be a preparation for the master thesis consisting of 60-80 pages, which will complete the degree along with two oral exams in the last semester.

IV.1.1 Organised Sport in Mediated Modernity

Head of the project at IESF:
Prof. Dr. Jürgen Mittag

IESF staff entrusted with the project:
Pia Klems (formerly Stemmermann), Daniel Ziesche

Period of research:
2012-2015

Funding:
Internal key research project of the German Sport University

Content:

The project defines Mediated Modernity as the epoch which started with the declaration of the human rights and which is characterized by a growing pluralisation of lifestyles, but also by a “mediatedness” of all personal circumstances. The sector of sports and physical activity is not the only one which changes dramatically during this era, but due to its massive differentiation and its strong connection to other parts of society it stands as a typical example for societal development and therefore works as an instrument for diagnosis of societal change. The goal of the project is a diagnosis of present modern societies communicated (or mediated) by movement cultures.

The colleagues in the sub-project „Organised Sport in Mediated Modernity“ at the institute of European Sports Development and Leisure Studies investigate these changes with regards to sports clubs as the smallest units of organised sport. Thereby, the sports club is considered from a (sport-)political and a (sport-)historical but also from a social scientific perspective with the aim to research the development of the socio-political functions of the sports club as a place and a medium in the process of societal change on a theoretical as well as an empirical level.

Within this framework, Daniel Ziesche researches the changing roles and socio-cultural functions of football clubs in selected regions of England and Germany with the aim of a deeper analysis of processes of change with regards to community formation, identity construction and the generation of social capital. Contemporary historical research is done by Pia Stemmermann regarding the values in the social field of sports clubs. She focuses on the values of a sports club as a seismograph for societal change to analyse the social respectively public welfare functions of sports clubs.

IV.1.3 Sport-political Structures, Contents and Processes of the Spanish Sport System

Researcher at IESF:
Ninja Putzmann

Period of research:
2012 - 2015

Funding:
German Sport University

Content:

In the European area numerous journals and articles offer an overview about the development of national sport policies and describe the institutional structures of sport, organisational and financial framework conditions. Nevertheless, empiric-analytic nation studies to explain correlations between sport structures, processes, and contents are missing as well as a theoretical fundament to analyse sport systems.

Deriving from the central question for the characteristic sport-political structures, processes, and contents of the Spanish sport system, three subordinated goals are defined: Firstly, the investigation of the theoretic-conceptual level by an adaption of the political scientific system theory including the terms of sport polity, sport politics and sport policy for the sport system of Spain as well as the effects of Europeanisation. On the typological level theoretically founded categories or typologies are developed to analyse the Spanish sport system. Focusing on some exemplary regions, the applicability of those typologies is empirically tested. Third the empiric-analytic level is examined by sequencing and summarising of new and existent data about the Spanish sport system respecting special characteristics of single regions of Spain to relate sport political structures, processes and contents. Perspectively, the elaborated categories can be used to enable a comparison of distinguished European sport systems what implies a certain degree of generalisation.

The fast and dynamic development of Asia attracts the interest of the media and the academic world alike. Though sport has not been the centre of attention, the reflection on Asian – and in particular on Chinese – sport development promises important insights. Against this backdrop the Institute of European Sport Development and Leisure Studies aims at deepening the transnational cooperation in sport related research between Asia and Europe. Major fields of interest are the areas of economics, elite sports and urban planning/health/grassroots sport as well as civil society.

One key activity has been a congress set on Chinese sport development and German-Chinese sport cooperation in 2013. It is planned to initiate a number of workshops on specific topics and research questions in the next years. In addition to this, the exchange of academics, doctoral students and master students will be increased.

IV.1.5 Bourgeois and Trade Unionists: Ludwig Rosenberg

Head of the project at IESF:
Prof. Dr. Jürgen Mittag

IESF staff entrusted with the project:
Dr. Frank Ahland

Period of research:
2011 - 2015

Funding:
Hans-Böckler-Foundation

Content:

The research project is anchored in the area “work and leisure studies” and blends into the shortly recorded upswing of trade unionist biography which may broaden the knowledge of the trade union’s elite in general and inform about trade union history in Germany. In line with this, the project is devoted to the biography of Ludwig Rosenberg.

Although the project is mainly a political, organisational and socio-historical biography one, it contributes to the debate about underlying tendencies of the economic, social and political development of West Germany in the post-war period. Also known as “westernisation” this development has been applied to unionist history as well.

The biography investigates political problems of the unionists from the 1940s to the 1970s, their scope of action, their internal structures and external relationships and the changes of the union’s societal stance in this period. Finally, it inquires how Rosenberg can be ranged in the trade unionist elite. Of specific interest for IESF’s academic research is the “European role” of Ludwig Rosenberg since he was deeply rooted in several European networks (among others the Monnet’s Action Committee) on the one hand and the discussion about work and leisure at that time in which Rosenberg was engaged on the other.

Rosenberg’s biography conveys deep insights into the internal structures of the umbrella organisation of the unions, the relations between chairpersons of single unions and the president of the federal committee and the organisation of political culture of unions. The final result of this project will be the publication of a biography issued in the end of 2015.

IV.1.6 Scientific monitoring of the Sector Programme „Sport for development“

In the recent years individual sport-related measures have been carried out repeatedly in the German Development Cooperation; this issue was, however, never systematic and fully established.

For this reason the Federal Ministry of Economic Cooperation and Development (BMZ) established a project sector on the subject, in order to bring together the experience and cooperate in the German contribution to „Sport and Development“. The Sector Programme „sport for development“ is anchored within the German Society for International Cooperation (GIZ), which as a federal enterprise supports the government in achieving its objectives in the international Development Cooperation and bringing them into action.

The Sector Programme includes in his work the following core areas that are closely linked together: In addition to advising the responsible authorities for sport in the BMZ Sector Unit, support in the coordination, and in the relevant German actors network (ministries, sports associations, civil society, business and science), application-related pilot projects will be initiated and supported. The evaluation of the existing experience of the GIZ in the field of „sport for development“, as well as the scientific monitoring and evaluation of pilot projects are also included. The IESF and the International Council of Sport Science and Physical Education (ICSSPE) are therefore closely involved as scientific institutions from the outset in the consulting, monitoring and evaluation processes. Through the scientific support the Sector Programme promises that additional insights in this area are going to be gained, processed and analyzed, and these will be used in the Development Cooperation to increase the quality and the effectiveness of the results of the Sector Programme.

The pilot measures in Brazil, Namibia, Afghanistan, Mozambique, Colombia and the Palestinian territories are always conducted with a topical focus such as sport in schools, major events, good governance, promotion of health, support of girls, etc. In all countries it is going to be linked with already existing bilateral structures and already established cooperation, and the work will be closely linked with local (project) partners, such as local NGOs and educational institutions.

Following the Conference on “Transformation and Development through Sport (TADS)” in Pretoria, South Africa in September 2013, seven participating academic organisations and NGOs, namely the University of Ghana, the German Sport University, the University of the Western Cape, the International Council of Sport Science and Physical Education (ICSSPE), the Breakthrough Chiparamba Sports Academy (BCSA, Zambia) and the Organisation of Rural Primary Education Developers (ORPED, Ghana) founded the International Scientific Network for Sport for Development (ISNSD).

Together they set the objective to develop a global and multi-disciplinary network of academic organisations and NGOs for continuous contribution to the advancement of sport for development curricula, programmes and policies. Herewith the network aims to establish evidence-based international benchmarks and standardised criteria for curriculum development and educational measures with regard to and across various policy sectors (health, development, sport, youth, education etc.), sports and working areas (community development, peace building etc.).

Concrete measures as a first step include the development of a database containing patterns, curricula, projects and partners; the provision of assistance and expertise in research, teaching and community engagement in the field of Sport for Development as well as the stimulation of a quality assurance discussion with university and non-university curriculum providers to enhance the standards and qualification levels of personnel delivering sport-for-development programmes.

Content:

In several research projects at the IESF social, cultural and mental impacts of leisure and tourism during the 20th century are analyzed. The focus of these research activities lies on the development, expansion and transnational dimension of leisure-cultures in Western societies after the Second World War and on the changes of the 1960s and 1970s – in particular on the evolution and consolidation of “mass” and “alternative” tourism and the changes in the field of leisure sports. Since these research activities such as a textbook on tourism history, a workshop and a doctoral thesis on tourism development in the 1970s and 1980s, are designed as long term projects, they are able to enhance the strengthening of humanities and social science perspectives on leisure- and tourism research.

“Recall: Games of the Past – Sports for Today” aimed to reintroduce European Traditional Sports and Games (TSG) into the daily lives of young Europeans in order to achieve two main objectives:

- to preserve and promote an endangered and critical part of European culture and heritage, as well as
- to implement TSG as the effective resource to increase participation in Sport for All that TAFISA and its collaborative partners know TSG to be.

The project “Recall” produced practical and educational tools to reintroduce European TSG into today’s society for five key target groups – schools, universities, sports clubs and associations, event organisers and people with disabilities. It also identified, collected, documented and promoted European Traditional Sports and Games via the creation of a European TSG database and heritage list. This dual approach allows Europeans, in particular young Europeans, to rediscover and reinvigorate regional, national and European heritage whilst tackling modern issues such as sport and physical activity participation and social inclusion.

Public awareness of the impact of Mega Sporting Events on children rights is a recent phenomenon and it shows considerable variation between countries. This research was conducted in order to collect evidence and increase awareness on direct and indirect effects of Mega Sporting Events (MSEs) to mitigate risks and enhance opportunities for children. It outlines differences between 12 countries (Brazil, France, Germany, India, Italy, the Netherlands, Russia, South Africa, Spain, Switzerland, the United States and the United Kingdom), and examines how media covered the Mega Sporting Events (MSEs) and their impact on human rights and particular on children rights.

Media resources from the 1st of January to the 31st of December 2014 were scrutinized and peaks as well as lows in media attention were identified and related to three MSEs: the Sochi 2014 Olympic Games, the 2014 FIFA World Cup Brazil(TM) and the Glasgow 2014 Commonwealth Games.

In the countries with a high awareness, indirect threats are widely reported and in-depth accounts of mechanisms directly violating children rights, such as poverty or sexual exploitation, are not rare. This leads to the conclusion that the opportunities for promoting children rights in these countries are much better than in countries with minimal awareness. Overall, this study can direct orientations for further research and potential guidance for advocacy activities. The results suggest that certain countries could benefit from more advocacy and awareness campaigns surrounding the issue of children rights and MSEs. A campaign in Russia, with its lack of press freedom, may be ineffectual, targeting Italy, Spain, India or South Africa could be more effective here.

Concerning the factors, economic as well as structural factors are mentioned most often and relate to the effects of poverty. In most cases, reports on sexual exploitation and child labour mention economic conditions as one of the causal factors. To sum up, the results of this exploratory study raise a lot more questions for future research using different news outlets, different mediums or different countries would help further our understanding of how the media reports on this topic: First, it would be advisable to check the reliability of the results, preferably in the countries of high awareness and therefore presumably more stable patterns. Second, there is a need for more research, e.g. in order to compare the same country as a host and as a non-host country. This survey can provide as baseline for future comparison and it will be quite interesting to evaluate the effect against the baseline of these results. All of this is realistic in a second wave focusing on the Rio 2016 Olympic Games or with the same set of MSEs again in 2016.

The Research Center „local sports policy and development (Forschungsstelle Kommunale Sportpolitik und-entwicklung) “of the German Sports University Cologne was commissioned by the city of Gelsenkirchen to analyze the sport in Gelsenkirchen in the period from December 2014 to October 2015. The investigation includes the analysis of the particularity of the Gelsensport model as well as the specific situation of the city Gelsenkirchen. The project includes among other things the investigation and classification of the political viability of sport in Gelsenkirchen and the benefits of sport and from Gelsensport for the city. With this the intersectoral concept of sport should be emphasized.

To this an inventory and analysis of the presently activities of Gelsensport and the analysis of the sport attention through schools and sports associations is implemented with a written survey of all sport associations in Gelsenkirchen and a written survey of the parents of four selected primary schools in Gelsenkirchen Schalke. Additionally an expert survey is performed with 150 experts of related areas of activity (youth sector, politics, integration, inclusion, senior citizens). To compare the situation of sport and sport associations in Gelsenkirchen with other cities, a project team member (Vanessa Hauert) participated at the first sport association conference in Mannheim, 24th February 2015 (1. Mannheimer Vereinskongress).

The aim of the project Sport development Gelsenkirchen is to develop new practical concepts for the urban development in Gelsenkirchen through sports as well as giving recommendations to optimize the sport in Gelsenkirchen.

IV.2 Ongoing Ph.D. Theses (Dissertations)

The following Ph.D. theses are carried out in the framework of the Institute of European Sport Development and Leisure Studies (in alphabetical order of doctoral students).

Sport in Development Policy - Evolution, Approaches and Implementation in Germany

Bauer, Katrin

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2014

With the establishment of the Sector Programme „Sport for Development“ of the German Development Cooperation (GIZ) in early 2013, the German development policy send a sign of change and reorientation. „Sport for Development“ has become an overarching topic with numerous connections to different development objectives of the Federal German Government.

It was recognized that sport is not only an important tool in the educational sector, but also in the areas of health promotion, violence prevention , gender equality , good governance , inclusion or environment. The aim of the project is the determination of the status and the transformation of sport in the development policy of Germany in the past and present.

Opportunities and Limitations of Youth Sport Programs in Cape Town: Analysis of Determinants in the Context of Development and Their Impact on Research

Biermann, Marie

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2011

supported by the Cusanuswerk: Bischöfliche Studienförderung

The research project is embedded in the broader field of sport-for-development and is located in Cape Town, South Africa in two different projects. Both projects aim at life-skill development but are different in structure and program. The research takes place while the intervention is still ongoing, with the data being collected from February till July 2013 and February till July 2014. The projects are not only being analysed in terms of their effectiveness and processes with regard to life-skill development but also concerning the methods used for evaluating the interventions. What are the effects of sport-based life-skill programs on youths? How do these effects come about? Which processes underlie them? What conditions are necessary for sport-based life-skill programs to have beneficial outcomes? In order to answer these questions two qualitative methods, the 'Most Significant Change' method and participant observation, are applied, as well as quantitative approaches. All of them are used complementary to assure triangulation, increasing reliability and validity of measures, and also getting insights into the same sociological phenomenon from different perspectives. Is there a difference in the appropriateness of the methods used to identify processes? Is there a difference in the appropriateness of the methods concerning the different projects and programs? The methods themselves are also analysed concerning their useful application in different programs and fields. So far, the MSC-method and participant observation have successfully been applied in areas outside sport and imply a potential for innovations in the area of monitoring and evaluating sport-in-development projects.

Football and achieving egalitarian social structures in India - Optimization of civil society conditions in the transformation process of a patriarchal society

Buch, Rosemary

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2014

The dissertation copes with the influence of football for girls on the transformation of the male dominated Indian society. The development of conditions that optimise the positive outcomes of football on gender equality and thus support the transformation of patriarchal structures will be the focal point of the research. It will be analysed to which degree a planned project in India could be implemented, applying the transformations theory and cooperative game theory. The relationship of the foundations on one side and the NGOs on the other will be taken into account to examine if their interaction will constrain the chances of the project's ideal outcomes. The author argues that a transformation of social structures is not possible without securing the sustainable empowerment of females within the society. Sustainable Empowerment means in this case not only the process of girls' self-organisation, but also the positive effects on institutional and social structures that constitute women's discrimination in India today. A theory will be developed which determines the back couplings of self-organising processes to a transformation of patriarchal structures.

The Relation of Governmental and Non-Governmental Sport Politics in Germany and France

Fischer, Christoph

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2009

The fundamental question of the research project concerns the similarities and differences between the German and the French sport system referring to the cooperation and the reciprocal understanding of governmental and non-governmental institutions of sport administration and aims on defining their characteristics. The empirical proceeding is based on an analysis of the legal foundations of each system. This includes statutes, regulations, statutes of clubs and federations, target agreements and other bilateral settlements as well as the structures and construction of each sport system and interrogations of experts and representatives of governmental and non-governmental institutions of Germany and France. The paper aims to extend and refine the existent structural and political comparisons in sport sciences. Against the backdrop of political science approaches of pluralism and neo-corporatism, the results of the empirical research will be discussed with a special focus on the features of sport as a sector of the society.

No Normal Sport in an Abnormal Society: Characteristics, Achievements and Limitations of Protests in Sport Against the Apartheid Regime in South Africa

Hangebrauck, Jan

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2013

The dissertation refers to the field of transnational history (of sport) and analyses the effects of the protests in sport in South Africa but also in the Federal Republic of Germany, in the German Democratic Republic and in the United Kingdom against the apartheid regime. The work will focus on the investigation of the 1960s, 1970s and 1980s, beginning with the Sharpeville massacre, which led to a massive increase and radicalization of protest against the apartheid regime, and ending with the first democratic elections in South Africa in April 1994 which sealed the end of apartheid.

Due to a lack of literature on the effects of protests in sport during the end of the apartheid regime, the study aims to identify variables for the effects of protests with the help of archival studies in the above mentioned countries and with the use of qualitative interviews, mainly with sport officials and former athletes. It will be the purpose of the thesis to offer new insights into the impact of protests in sport. In that way the work intends to contribute to intensified linkages in the academic fields of the history of sports, of sport sociology and of sport politics.

Sport Clubs and Sport Values in Change

Klems, Pia

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2012

The importance of a sport club is based on its memberships, its resources and its financial possibilities. Mostly disregarded are the values within a sports club. Sports clubs stand for an internal and external integration of certain values. These values are an important aspect of modern society and take an impact on public life. The individual adapts certain values from other social contexts and introduces them in a sports club. The question of influence and meaning of values within a sports club on and for the individual the society and the state can be raised. Within the context of this thesis the change of values in the Ruhr area is of special interest. The panel study of values in a sports club is based on sources of chosen sports clubs. Sources are literature produced by the sports club, such as celebratory publications, club papers or charters.

European Commission and Sport: Increasing “Centralism” or “Spill-Over” in a Multi-Level-Governance-System?

Kornbeck, Jacob

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2009

As a PhD by published work, this thesis aims to revisit the activities of the European Commission (in particular but not exclusively within the years 2001 2011) to find evidence of a diversification of the sport policy field. This allows for a feedback loop towards two fundamental theoretical positions of European integration and relevant research: spillover as used in federalism/neo-functionalism as well as multi-level governance. Empirical evidence is provided through 15 already published papers within three problem areas: EU-sport articulation; anti-doping; Health-Enhancing Physical Activity (HEPA). The exercise of critically revisiting these papers was inspired theoretically by the model of the reflective practitioner.

„... and for the Honor of our Nation(s)“: German Olympic Policy between 1960 and 1968

Lippmann, Karsten

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2012

This graduate thesis deals with the sports policy of both German states during the years 1960 to 1968. It is looked at as part of the intra-German policy. For this reason the thesis focusses on Olympic subjects.

To describe adequately what was going on in this years, Kleßmanns concept of asymmetric intertwined parallel history is extended with elements of the theory of dynamic transaction that was developed by Früh to describe the effects of media. The concept of dynamic intertwined history of communication, which emerged this way, gives us the opportunity to look at the eight perhaps most eventful years of German sports history and to see it as a result of intersecting actions and reactions.

The first goal on this process was to gain influence on the I.O.C. Both German states were successful in this respect. The FRG became the Olympic host in 1972, and in Munich the GDR received the right to use their own national symbols during the summer games for the first time.

This graduate thesis describes the way that led to this solution, which satisfied both sides, but made neither of them really happy.

Changes in youth development programs in Basketball in Germany, Lithuania and Spain since 1995 – Governance between Europeanization and Globalization?

Melzer, Marius

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2012

Since November 2012 Marius Melzer focuses on the changes in youth development programs in Basketball in Germany, Lithuania and Spain. With a combination of theoretical approaches coming from Sports Europeanization, Sports Globalization and Sports Governance, he aims to discover how the increase of the possibilities to recruit basketball players has affected the youth development programs in these countries. Melzer sees the starting point of an intensification of the national youth development programs in the Bosman-ruling of the European Court of Justice, but the core of the developments in the interaction between the national federation and the first league clubs. Therefore, Melzer has analyzed the governance arrangement between these actors to find out why Spain and Lithuania constantly promote more young players than Germany.

"Spiritual Coaching" – Theological, Social Science and Sport Science Perspectives on a New Occupational Area

Micic, Michael

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2011

Aim of this interdisciplinary project is to analyse moral concepts, ideals and lifestyle of professional soccer players in order to disclose the influence of the mentioned factors on their wellbeing and sport performance. Furthermore, the research focuses on deriving a "Spiritual and Life Coaching" model for the professional German soccer within reflecting the boundaries and possibilities of such a coaching model. As in the English and Brazilian soccer spiritual coaching by so called "Sport Chaplains" is already set in praxis, existent analyses of this area are used to develop the model. The collection of data in professional German soccer clubs is done by interviews with officials and players.

Impacts of Sport on the Regime Changes and Transformation Processes in Iraq and Egypt

Ousu, Ali

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2012

Sport fulfils numerous functions between state and society. Sport serves in particular to form national group identities, fosters international understanding, enhances cooperation and exposes the individual. Although sport is a widely autonomous system that follows specific rules and dynamics, it is open to the allocation of meanings and new functions, but also to societal changes. The ongoing revolutions in the Arabic world will not only impact the society, but also the sports system by changing the framing circumstances and the functions or meanings of sport. The dissertation wants to consider and analyse these changes of the sport system among the current societal and political transformations.

Sport-Political Structures, Contents and Processes of the Spanish Sport System

Putzmann, Ninja

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2012

In the European area numerous journals and articles offer an overview about the development of national sport policies and describe the institutional structures of sport, organizational and financial framework conditions. Nevertheless, empiric-analytic nation studies to explain correlations between sport structures, processes and contents are missing as well as a theoretical fundament to analyse sport systems.

Deriving from the central question for the characteristic sport-political structures, processes and contents of the Spanish sport system, three subordinated goals are defined: Firstly, the investigation of the theoretic-conceptual level by an adaption of the political scientific system theory including the terms of sport polity, sport politics and sport policy for the sport system of Spain as well as the effects of Europeanisation. On the typological level theoretically founded categories or typologies are developed to analyse the Spanish sport system. Focusing on some exemplary regions, the applicability of those typologies is empirically tested. Third the empiric-analytic level is examined by sequencing and summarising of new and existent data about the Spanish sport system respecting special characteristics of single regions of Spain to relate sport political structures, processes and contents.

Perspectively, the elaborated categories can be used to enable a comparison of distinguished European sport systems what implies a certain degree of generalisation.

Anti-Doping-Politics in the Federal Republic of Germany

Risse, Gunnar

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2012

The project uses the theoretical and methodological instruments of political science to deal with the developments in the fight against doping in Germany, beginning in 1990. While findings from applied economics, sociology and history are taken as a starting point, the main aim of the analysis is to describe and understand the relationship and goals of different actors in the field of anti-doping-policy, using the framework of actor-centered institutionalism. To explain the influence of single actors, the project refers to a multi-dimensional theory of power. In addition, key ideas from political network-analysis, Tsebelis' thoughts on veto-players and some basic components of the principal-agent-approach are taken into consideration. To gather information about the object of investigation, the study uses content-analysis as well as semi-structured guided interviews with policy-makers and decision-makers from sport organisations. It is the purpose of the study to systematically describe past developments, understand the current situation and develop different scenarios for the future with regard to their likeliness.

Integration in Sports Clubs: Development of a social science-based Quality Management Model

Schädler, Timo

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2012

This thesis intends the development of a social science-based QM-Model for integration processes in Sports Clubs. Applications are explained in a functional context. The work study aims to contribute to a topical and problem-related interdisciplinary discourse of political science, sociology, education and business administration in the overall context of sports science. The objective is to develop a systematic theory-based QM-Model, that helps to visualize and realize integration processes in a sports club and beyond it to areas of society. The heterogeneity of the sporting sector with its different orientation and directions of integration policies encourage the development of a model that can meet these requirements at an appropriate level of abstraction. The development of the QM-Model for integration is carried out in close context of theoretical foundation and practical relevance.

Changing Sport-policies in the Ukraine

Ulyanov, Illya

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2012

The aim of the scientific thesis is to analyse the Ukrainian sport policy, their structures and the processes which extent influence on the development of mass sport and leisure sport.

The focus of the research are the governmental programmes and organisational measures which promote sport as well as the development of mass sport, leisure sport and the sport participation of the Ukrainian people. Since the independence of the Ukraine in the year 1991, numerous/ various measures were initiated to promote mass sport and leisure sport. These initiatives are analysed in this work with regard to their successes and limits. This consideration is complemented by investigations concerning sustainability of the initiated measures. Finally, as a result of the previous steps, the efficiency and capability of the Ukrainian sport policy shall be presented exemplarily.

The study refers to political and legal conditions by taking the historical and social characteristics of the country into account. Additionally, external factors, which influence the development of the mass sport and leisure sport directly or indirectly, are part of the analysis as well as the recent political and social events in the Ukraine in 2014.

Leisure – Tourism – Sport: The Impact of Sport in the 1970s

Wendland, Diana

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2014

The dissertation project is dealing with the development of leisure sport as an essential part of leisure activities and daily routine since the 1970s. The focus lies on the role of sport and sport participation in a postmodern event based society "Erlebnisgesellschaft" (Schulze 1997) and of the importance of a "mental" value or consciousness of leisure sport beyond the rules and norms of competitive sport. Against this backdrop the thesis differentiates between sport in leisure and leisure sport. The example of the development of sport tourism shall illustrate the general "sportization" of society.

Organised Sport in Transition: Social and Cultural Functions of Football Clubs in England and Germany

Ziesche, Daniel

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2012

The various transformational processes which shape modern societies (e.g. globalisation, individualisation, and urbanisation) present football clubs (and sport clubs in general) with critical challenges with regards to their future development. Likewise, the self-proclaimed functions which sport clubs allegedly traditionally fulfil are being increasingly questioned.

Against the backdrop of an ongoing regional structural transformation – along with a shifting social structure within the geographical sphere of influence of the clubs – the project raises the question in how far roles and functions of football clubs have changed and how resistant or adaptable clubs present themselves in view of those transformational processes. The project thereby focuses on transformational dimensions within three functional fields which football clubs allegedly fulfil: Collective identity construction, community building, and the generating of social capital (understood both in Putnam's and Bourdieu's tradition).

The qualitative analysis will investigate football clubs from regions in England and Germany which have been subject to severe structural change that confronts the football clubs in these regions with formidable challenges. The investigated clubs are playing at the fourth and fifth level of the league pyramid. Firstly, because at this level strong club-internal tensions are presumed with regards to the future alignment of the clubs; secondly, because football research tends to focus on the top tiers of the league system and widely neglects non-league football. The project at hand intends to contribute to the closing of this blind spot in research.

Main objectives of the project are on one side to expose how regional localisation and differences in the structural organisation of football clubs have repercussions on the adaptive abilities of these clubs. On the other side, alleged functions of football clubs for modern societies are expected to be proven or to be refuted which would allow for the delivering of a theoretical framework. On this basis a further and deeper-reaching analysis of social and cultural functions of clubs could be achieved.

The Role of the Asian Football Confederation

Weinberg, Ben

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, 2010-2013

Football is the most popular sport in the world. However, globalisation and commercialisation of the game have also created new conflicts and challenges in football and politics. The thesis explores the role of the Asian Football Confederation (the AFC) within the rising significance of the football in Asia, drawing on three key theoretical perspectives: globalisation, neoinstitutionalism and governance, as well as comprehensive data from interviews and archive material. It explores the organisational structure of the AFC, its decision making processes, relations with other actors and policies put forward. To understand the specificities AFC has faced in its 60-year history, the broader historical, political, economic, socio-cultural and geographic contexts of football in Asia are taken into account.

- V.3 6th Symposium Sport Policy: Sport as Motor for Health Policy? Approaches, Players, Conflicts
- V.4 Organised Sport in Mediated Modernity

V.1 Sport & EU Conference 2014

Date: 26th / 27th June 2014

Place: German Sport University Cologne

Framework:

The 9th annual conference of Sport & EU was hosted by the German Sport University Cologne from 26th to 27th of June 2014. It is jointly organized by the Department of Political Science of the University of Mainz and by the German Sports University's Institute for European Sport Development and Leisure Studies. The hosts are Prof. Dr. Jürgen Mittag (Cologne), Prof. Dr. Arne Niemann and Dr. Alexander Brand (Mainz).

Content:

The unflagging convergence between sport and other social areas as well as the increasing interference of governmental and non-governmental players on the organisation of sport indicate the growing importance of the relationship between policy-making and sport. The triggered substantial changes within the European sport system in particular and sport governance in general still lack systematic research. Against this backdrop, the conference aimed to enhance research on European sport systems in view of either the national and the European level – and its linkages.

V.2 International Conference of Sport Government and Governance in Asia

Date: 16th-19th October 2014

Place: Nanchang, China

Content:

The International Conference of Sport Government and Governance 2014, with the title "Sport Government and Governance in Asia - Actors, Structures, Values" was organized by The International Journal of the History of Sport, Routledge. The German Sport University Cologne was together with the Confucius Institute at the University of Western Australia Co-Organizer of the conference. In this framework Prof. Dr. Jürgen Mittag, Head of the IESF, was involved as member of the Academic Committee as well as Keynote Speaker of the conference.

V.3 6th Symposium Sport Policy: Sport as Motor for Health Policy? Approaches, Players and Conflicts

Date: 1st November 2014

Place: 7th International Sport-Congress Hamburg

Content:

During the 7th international Sport Congress in Hamburg, the German Sport University organized the 6th Symposium Sport Policy with following topics:

Areas of conflict and programmatic activities related to work

Is the pursuit of Health incompatible with modern working conditions or is there room for co-evolution? This section emphasized the enormous social and political relevance of sports and its respective contribution to physical, emotional and social Health on the one hand and the significance of the latter for functioning working environments. Well-known experts in the field with political or associational backgrounds highlighted common ground and diverging interests of the relevant actors in the interplay of health, sports and work.

Politics and policies in local Healthcare: Fostering Health in a network of municipalities, schools and leisure sports? The questions central to this section were: Which positions in local healthcare-provision are held by municipal administrations, politicians and organised sport? Which role can sports and exercise play with regard to health care and prevention? State and associations as well as practices and players in the field of tourism were scrutinised.

V.4 Organised Sport in Mediated Modernity

Date: 20th/21st November 2014

Place: German Sports University Cologne

Content:

Researchers of the German Sports University cooperate since 2012 in the project "sport in mediated modernity". The core ambitions of the four partaking institutes consist of the systematic elaboration and theoretical mapping of those deep changes within the sports- and exercise-cultures of modern societies that have taken place over the last decades and are still going on.

The concluding symposium presented and discussed the results of the research activities, be it the partial endeavours of individual institutes or the broader context. Engaging in a dialogue on the basis of working papers with experts coming from sports science and neighboring disciplines, the symposium outlined which changes in sports- and exercise-culture can claim to be typical for which general trends in society and to what extent these changes have a seismographic function for social change. The organizers are indebted to Fritz-Thyssen-Foundation for the funding of the event.

V.5 "Playing to build Europe" - The Formation of a European Football Sphere (1919-1991)

Date: 5th / 6th February 2015

Place: International conference of the Université de Lausanne, Lausanne

Partners:

De Monfort University, Leicester, International Centre for Sports History and Culture (ICSHC)
German Sport University Cologne, Institut of European Sport Development and Leisure Studies (IESF)

Content:

Since 1990, football history has greatly expanded within the field of sport science. In particular, historians have worked on professionalization, on the development of football's institutions or even its mediatization in a variety of geographic areas and especially Europe; nevertheless, few studies can be considered genuinely continental in their analysis or with respect to their source material. Historians have mainly worked within a national framework, and even collective work remains, for the most part, a collection of national cases. Furthermore, the few existing works really centred on continental football focus primarily on the first half of the twentieth century, even though the period between 1950 and 1980 is fundamental regarding the "Europeanization" of football (creation of a sovereign institution, establishment of specific rules about players' transfers and contracts and, especially, the development of competitions). However, some authors have already worked on the use of football by the State in their soft power strategies. At the opposite, few research have focused on the role of the football manager's, who created a true transnational community and permit that football played up geopolitical tensions and often take the "wrong-foot" of political decisions.

With this in mind, the conference permitted discussions and transnational debates about the special place of football on the European scene from 1919 to 1991. Based on many cases and topics, the conference showed the steps of the structuration of a genuine 'European' football sphere, studied activities and motivations from managers and finally described the (relative) autonomy of football regarding State policies. The discussions contributed to the rise of some new analysis and indicated suggestions for future research. The conference offered a space of discussion between some young and also more experienced researchers. In this context, the aim was to pursue contacts already established in some European networks, as around the FREE (Football Research in Enlarged Europe) project.

Besides, this new conference can be seen as the continuation of a previous one organised in Lausanne six years ago on the occasion of the European Championship of 2008, which revealed both the place and the role of Switzerland in the development of international football during the twentieth century. Published in a collective volume Le football suisse in 2009, the contributions of this initial research highlighted the necessity to focus on an international level to pursue our understanding of football history.

V.6 Doping: Background - Players - Perspectives

Date: 24th - 26th April 2015

Place: German Sport University Cologne

Partners: Institut for European Sport Development and Leisure Studies (IESF)
Research-Group Sport of Friedrich-Ebert-Stiftung

Responsible:

Prof. Dr. Jürgen Mittag, Dr. Till Müller-Schoell, Gunnar Risse
Jan-Hendrik Flecke, Jennifer Danquah, Jan Vogt, Lennart Feix

Content:

During the workshop the history of doping, definitions and legal matters were discussed. To understand the difficulties in tracing the substances, there was a visit of the doping laboratory at the German Sport University on the agenda.

Further questions like political and social aspects of doping and the value of anti-doping politics were covered and discussed in different workshops. As a contrast to this an insight view into everyday life of top athletes was given.

V.7 Europe-Week: Sport and Development Policy: Real Interaction or Pure Rhetoric?

Date: 5th May 2015

Place: German Sport University Cologne

Partner:

Ministerium für Bundesangelegenheiten, Europa und Medien des Landes Nordrhein-Westfalen

Participants at Public Discussion:

Marianne Meier (terre des hommes), Clemens Mukolzi (Jambo Bukoba), Gerald Guskowski (GIZ Bonn), Karen Petry (DSHS), Sibö Janssen (University Cologne)

Presenter: Bastian Budde (Deutschlandradio)

Content:

While policies for development have a long and rich history of projects on national as well as on European level, the topic of “development and sports” has only recently and over the last decade come into the focus of politicians, associations and the broader public. Generally, the debate is dominated by the question, what exactly can be achieved in development with and through sports and exercise. Priority aims in development have always been the fight against poverty, capacity building in education and the improvement of infrastructure; sports-related development activities have therefore always needed extra legitimating. Moreover, there is no reason to believe that needs and motives related to sports and exercise are uniform all over the world. In a similar vein, it constitutes a flawed and misled idea to transfer successful regulations, patterns and curricula from one country to another without further reflection. These highly topical issues inspired a mildly controversial debate amongst experts and the engaged auditorium.
