I. Preface

When the Jean Monnet Chair at the Institute of European Sport Development and Leisure Studies at German Sport University has been established in 2011, one major target was the introduction of a regular teaching program that offers the students comprehensive modules on sport politics with particular references to the EU dimension of sport. After four years of preparatory work and after crossing many hurdles, the new Master program finally becomes effective. With the beginning of the winter term 2016/17 a group of 35 students from Germany, the EU member states and Non-EU-countries will be part of the new Master program "International Sport Development and Politics".

The students will acquire basic knowledge on theories and methods as well as deepen their knowledge in sport politics. In order to understand and to analyse processes in European and international sport politics the Master program combines sport sciences with humanities, social sciences and economics. Entirely held in English, the program is highly research oriented. By using comparative approaches at the European and international level the M.A. program will illustrate in how far sport has become a complex international system of structures.

With the new Master program the Jean Monnet Chair aims at fostering the academic relevance of European and international sport politics – a research field that attracts growing attention but that still suffers from dialogue and intense academic debates. The Master program will surely increase the public activities of the Institute of European Sport Development and Leisure Studies. All readers of this fifth annual report – covering the period from summer 2015 to summer 2016 are welcomed to have a closer look at the Institute's past activities. And the readers are also invited to take part in the Institute's forthcoming events that will also be announced in the IESF newsletter and on the web-pages of the Institute.

Questions, proposals and critical comments are – as always – highly appreciated and can be addressed to the Jean Monnet Chair (iesf@dshs-koeln.de).

II. Leitbild/Mission of the Institute

The German Sport University Cologne (GSU) is Germany's most important academic centre of teaching and research in physical education and sport science and one of the largest specialised universities world-wide. With 21 academic departments it covers a wide range of sport science in teaching and research. More than 30 sports are taught in theory and practice in modern facilities. Around 5,500 students, including 350 foreign students, are studying at the GSU, which offers academic Bachelor's and Master's degrees, teaching certificates for various school levels and a doctoral degree. The Institute of European Sport Development and Leisure Studies and its Jean Monnet Chair work towards contributing to the European dimension of sport in particular and to the international development of sport structures in general.

The ongoing interdependence of sport and other societal fields, the increasing economic power of sport, the growing influence of governmental and non-governmental actors on the organisation of sport, its framework, and the continuing Europeanisation and globalisation have increased the importance of sport politics. However, the development of a political science inspired approach to sport and the formation of a particular branch addressing the broad range of sport-related political issues are still at the very beginning.

Against this background, activities of the IESF aim to cooperate with national and international academics in order to bring together findings from political, social and sport sciences. The overall goal is to illustrate the specific core of sport political action by taking into account the three dimensions polity (structural-institutional), politics (procedural) and policy (content-related). For all dimensions, it is important not only to consider the horizontal differentiation between regional autonomy and governmental regulation, but also the vertical differentiation between local, regional, national, European and international levels, to meet the needs of a sport political multi-level system. This view is mirrored in the two main research areas of the Institute: national, European and international sport systems and politics and the role of sport in international development cooperation.

III. Teaching Activities

The Institute of European Sport Development and Leisure Studies (IESF) is engaged in the teaching of various mandatory courses in the following study programmes of the German Sport University Cologne (GSU):

Additionally, the students acquire general competences and knowledge for stays abroad in the working field of „sport and development cooperation“.

Summer School on Leisure Sport, Tourism and Sport Studies in Germany

This Summer School - organized with Shanghai University of Sport – offered the opportunity to become familiar with leisure, sport and tourism in Germany and Europe. The Summer School addresses academic approaches to leisure studies and tourism. The Summer School lasts four weeks and is held in English.

Field Trip Brussels 2016:

European Sports Politics in Practice was the title of a two-day field-trip that took 23 students to Brussels in April 2016. It was organised and supervised by Till Müller-Schoell. The students visited many of the key institutions and sports interest groups located in Brussels and were able to interact with staff from organisations such as the European Commission, the European Parliament, the European Olympic Committees and the EU Athletes Association. The experience allowed for the group to see politics firsthand and to grasp the greater, more formalised role sports is taking on the European stage. European politics became more than just names, dates and institutions.

III.4 Specialized Teaching Project: HOMER

HOMER has a transnational impact since it brings together German Sport University Cologne (GSU), the University of Cologne, and the University of Maastricht as a Jean Monnet Center of Excellence.

HOMER is a six step research-based teaching program that seeks to identify narratives, focusing on three history making summits of national leaders in the history of European integration.

HOMER's background:

The future of the European Union will increasingly be shaped by the perception of its history and an evolving European memory culture. Against this backdrop, it is necessary to pay more attention to the European Council which has been the key institution in terms of history making decisions.

The project addresses three critical junctures in order to analyse their impact on the development of European narratives: The almost forgotten 1969 summit of The Hague was central to the emergence of the EU and the European Council as an entity. The Maastricht summit of 1991 was a history-making act for the deepening of European integration. The 2009 summit of Lisbon opened a new age for the construction of the EU. The project assesses these summits and analyses their roles in developing a 'master narrative' of European integration. The main rationale of the project is to contribute to the evolving European memory culture by scrutinizing past and existing interpretations while simultaneously building on these.

The project addresses three critical junctures in order to analyse their impact on the development of European narratives: The almost forgotten 1969 summit of The Hague was central to the emergence of the EU and the European Council as an entity. The Maastricht summit of 1991 was a history-making act for the deepening of European integration. The 2009 summit of Lisbon opened a new age for the construction of the EU. The project assesses these summits and analyses their roles in developing a 'master narrative' of European integration. The main rationale of the project is to contribute to the evolving European memory culture by scrutinizing past and existing interpretations while simultaneously building on these.

Each year one of the three summits will be tackled by HOMER:

- first year: the summit of The Hague 1969 (Summer term 2015)
- second year: the European Council taking place in Maastricht 1991 (Winter term 2015/2016)
- third year: the Lisbon summit 2009 that opened a new age for the construction of the EU and generally for Europe (Winter term 2016/17).

Today, the European Council forms the key body in the institutional architecture of the EU. The Maastricht summit in 1991 has reassured its importance, since this summit paved substantially the way to today's European Union.

The seminar addressed the question whether and to which extent the Maastricht summit can be considered as a critical juncture in the history of European integration. Beyond a focus on actors, motives, negotiations and outcomes of the summit, students assessed the way the Maastricht summit was perceived at the time and how it is remembered today. What were and are the views of politicians? How do academic scholars write about it? How did the media report about it at the time, and do journalists sometimes refer to it today? On all these issues, there are differences between member states, political camps and generations? Some differences seem of continuing relevance, other interpretations tend to converge over time. And, more generally, what is the place of the Maastricht summit in the wider history of EU summitry, and what is the role of summits in narratives of European integration?

In the context of this HOMER-Seminar, students from the German Sport University Cologne, Maastricht University and the University of Cologne engaged in interdisciplinary, research-oriented exchange, worked with a broad variety of sources (newspaper articles, archival material, memoirs, academic interpretations, interviews). They were confronted with contrasting perceptions and narratives of the summit of the time with today's discussion. The introductory and final sessions took place in Maastricht. The students went to Brussels for a one-day workshop and had the opportunity to hear several lectures in the partaking universities.

III.5 Master International Sport Development and Politics

Head of the Project:

Prof. Dr. Jürgen Mittag, Prof. Dr. Stephan Wassong

Researchers involved:

Dr. Jörg Krieger, Dr. Ansgar Molzberger, Dr. Till Müller-Schoell,
Dr. Karen Petry

Period of Activity

since 2011

Content:

The M.A. International Sport Development and Politics aims at a comprehensive understanding of structures, actors and conflicts in sport and physical activity. It offers an international focus on sport, including transnational and comparative dimensions. In order to obtain a profound knowledge and understanding of sport in its political, social, cultural and economic framework, the Master program combines sport sciences with humanities, social sciences and economics. The program is highly research oriented and fosters problem-solving capacities as well as methods for understanding and analysing sport.

Academic orientation: The course combines approaches and concepts from social sciences and humanities to ensure the underpinning for an academic analysis of sport and physical culture. Based on this, the course aims at providing basic knowledge and tools for the analysis of central subject areas such as Sport Politics: Values, Frameworks and Institutions, Sport Politics: Comparative and International Sport Structures and Processes, Sport Politics: Past, Present and Future Fields of Challenges for Sport Development. In addition, the understanding of qualitative and quantitative methods is a key learning outcome.

Career orientation: During the first two semesters the acquisition of knowledge in lecture and seminars takes centre stage. The third and fourth semester aim at a specialization of the acquired skills as well as their testing and application in the current research and professional world both at home and abroad. The goal is to make students able to integrate their newly acquired skills and perspectives to solve real-world problems both in the field and in academics.

International Outlook: When comparing sport and physical activity cultures around the world, it is clear that an increasingly complex, comprehensive system of complementary and overlapping structures has arisen in the sport. Against this background, basic knowledge of sports systems, sports structures and sports development are taught in the program.

Diversity is another learning outcome of the program. The students enrolled come from diverse and varied backgrounds. Subjects range from a variety of topics and take into account various factors, including issues such as nationality, gender, age or religion.

Key Competencies: Through dialogue and interaction in the program, the following key competencies are acquired:

- Project-related methodological skills (including project planning, organization and implementation)
- Data-based assessment of competencies (including elaboration of source criticism, evaluations)
- Socio-political reflection skills (including uncovering of social structures, opportunities for participation)
- Social communication skills (use of teamwork and facilitation skills), intercultural skills (including identification of inclusion and exclusion).
- Language skills, as the M.A. is carried out as an English program.

State of the art:

The Master Program starts in October 2016. 35 students from at least 8 countries have been selected in order to take part in the first cohorte.

III.6 Summer School on Leisure Sport, Tourism and Sport Studies

Period of Activity:

since 2016

Background:

The first Summer University on School on Leisure Sport, Tourism and Sport Studies in Germany was jointly organized by German Sport University Cologne and Shanghai University of Sport. It took place between June 20th 2016 and July 15th 2016 in Cologne. 18 students from Shanghai stayed in Cologne in order to become familiar with leisure, sport and tourism in Germany and Europe. The Summer School addresses academic approaches to leisure studies and tourism.

In general, the summer school was considered as successful. The average grade the Chinese students gave the summer school was 8,7 (range between 0 and 10). The participants highlighted the variety of topics, the diverse teaching methods and the "professional knowledge" about sport tourism, EU policy and youth sport. Almost all students considered the sport practice and the field trips as most helpful elements of the summer university. Especially the excursion to the EU institutions in Brussels, the GPS hiking tour in Eifel National Park, the boxing and the Hip-Hop dance class were appreciated. Also some seminars, like the PE challenge, the research course and the tutorial on Academic Writing were positively mentioned. Many students also considered the logical way of thinking and the research methods that were taught as the most valuable learning experiences.

IV.1.2 Sport-political Structures, Contents and Processes of the Spanish Sport System

Content:

In the European area numerous journals and articles offer an overview about the development of national sport policies and describe the institutional structures of sport, organisational and financial framework conditions. Nevertheless, empiric-analytic nation studies to explain correlations between sport structures, processes and contents are missing as well as a theoretical fundament to analyse sport systems.

Deriving from the central question for the characteristic sport-political structures, processes and contents of the Spanish sport system, three subordinated goals are defined: Firstly, the investigation of the theoretic-conceptual level by an adaption of the political scientific system theory including the terms of sport polity, sport politics and sport policy for the sport system of Spain as well as the effects of Europeanisation. Secondly, on the typological level, theoretically founded categories or typologies are developed to analyse the Spanish sport system. Focusing on some exemplary regions, the applicability of those typologies is empirically tested. Thirdly, the empiric-analytic level is examined by sequencing and summarising of new and existent data about the Spanish sport system respecting special characteristics of single regions of Spain to relate sport political structures, processes and contents.

Perspectively, the elaborated categories can be used to enable a comparison of distinguished European sport systems what implies a certain degree of generalisation.

In the recent years individual sport-related measures have been carried out repeatedly in the German Development Cooperation; this issue was, however, never systematic and fully established.

For this reason the Federal Ministry of Economic Cooperation and Development (BMZ) established a project sector on the subject, in order to bring together the experience and cooperate in the German contribution to „Sport and Development“. The Sector Programme „sport for development“ is anchored within the German Society for International Cooperation (GIZ), which as a federal enterprise supports the government in achieving its objectives in the international Development Cooperation and bringing them into action.

The Sector Programme includes in its work the following core areas that are closely linked together: In addition to advising the responsible authorities for sport in the BMZ Sector Unit, support in the coordination and in the relevant German actors network (ministries, sports associations, civil society, business and science), application-related pilot projects will be initiated and supported. The evaluation of the existing experience of the GIZ in the field of „sport for development“, as well as the scientific monitoring and evaluation of pilot projects are also included. The IESF and the International Council of Sport Science and Physical Education (ICSSPE) are therefore closely involved as scientific institutions from the outset in the consulting, monitoring and evaluation processes. Through the scientific support the Sector Programme promises that additional insights in this area are going to be gained, processed and analyzed, and these will be used in the Development Cooperation to increase the quality and the effectiveness of the results of the Sector Programme.

The pilot measures in Brazil, Namibia, Afghanistan, Mozambique, Colombia, Jordan and the Palestinian territories are always conducted with a topical focus such as sport in schools, major events, good governance, promotion of health, support of girls, etc. In all countries it is going to be linked with already existing bilateral structures and already established cooperation, and the work will be closely linked with local (project) partners, such as local NGOs and educational institutions.

Following the Conference on “Transformation and Development through Sport (TADS)” in Pretoria, South Africa, in September 2013, seven participating academic organisations and NGOs, namely the University of Ghana, the German Sport University, the University of the Western Cape, the International Council of Sport Science and Physical Education (ICSSPE), the Breakthrough Chiparamba Sports Academy (BCSA, Zambia) and the Organisation of Rural Primary Education Developers (ORPED, Ghana) founded the International Scientific Network for Sport for Development (ISNSD).

Together they set the objective to develop a global and multi-disciplinary network of academic organisations and NGOs for continuous contribution to the advancement of sport for development curricula, programmes and policies. Here-with the network aims to establish evidence-based international benchmarks and standardised criteria for curriculum development and educational measures with regard to and across various policy sectors (health, development, sport, youth, education etc.), sports and working areas (community development, peace building etc.).

Concrete measures as a first step include the development of a database containing patterns, curricula, projects and partners; the provision of assistance and expertise in research, teaching and community engagement in the field of Sport for Development as well as the stimulation of a quality assurance discussion with university and non-university curriculum providers to enhance the standards and qualification levels of personnel delivering sport-for-development programmes.

Together with local and international partners, GIZ's „More space for sports - 1,000 opportunities for Africa“ project aims to use sport as a tool to bring positive changes in sub-Saharan Africa. To better achieve development policy objectives through sport, the project supports Ethiopia, Kenya, Namibia, Mozambique and Togo in three areas:

Copyright: GIZ - Ruth Lumbasi

- Provision of infrastructure and equipment for sporting activities: construction / renovation of sport grounds; provision of basic equipment and materials
- Capacity Building: Education and training for the use of sports facilities and delivery sports educational content
- Design of sport-based learning environments with partner organizations: the sport grounds are meant to be used to integrate sport activities and education on subjects such as health, violence prevention and personal development

The Institute for European Sport Development and Leisure supports the project by providing specialist advice on the development and implementation of an output-oriented monitoring system. The online monitoring system aims to combine information from the partner countries and to document the achievement of objectives in terms of country-specific indicators at different levels (effects at macro, meso and micro level). For this purpose, indicators as well as quantitative and qualitative data collection instruments will be developed. The creation of a national comprehensive monitoring plan and a glossary of key terms and technical definitions are also among the tasks.

Head of the project:

Dr. Karen Petry

Staff member:

Period of research:

July 2015 – April 2017

Content:

Funded by the UBS Optimus Foundation and initiated by Dr. Heather Cameron, a total of 20 Girls' Afterschool Clubs are implemented in the poverty- and violence stricken townships Khayelitsha, Gugulethu and Nyanga in South Africa. The clubs are attached to primary schools and their programme includes life skill and leadership training for 9 to 11 year-old girls, in order to improve school performance and enhance strategies for preventing gender-based violence.

In order to find out about whether and how the projects reach their set goals, the Girls' Afterschool Clubs are monitored and evaluated by the German Sports University Cologne. This process includes the development of evaluation instruments as well as data collection and data analysis. Quantitative and qualitative methodology is used to gain insights into the project's impact on girls' self-awareness, academic performance, social capital and violence negotiation skills. Apart from a close collaboration with local researchers in South Africa, students from the German Sports University will be supporting with data collection in the field.

Main goal of the Sport Physical Education And Coaching in Health (SPEACH) Project is to increase awareness and behavioural change in sport professionals and European citizens towards an active and healthy lifestyle.

Sedentariness and physical inactivity are a cross-national problem. Therefore, the project builds upon a strong collaborative-partnership to contribute in solving this problem on the European level and to increase sport and physical activity participation. To achieve this, the project will develop HEPA related educational modules, which will be included into existing education structures in the areas of sport coaching and physical education (PE), in order to stimulate pupils, young athletes and adults towards an active and healthy lifestyle.

An innovative aspect of the project is the diversity of partners involved. The consortium consists of ten organizations and actors from seven EU countries in the field of sport, PE and health. The partners involved are national and international sports committees, sport federations and higher educational institutes in the field of sport, PE teacher education and health. Finally, the project is strongly supported by the European Network of Sport Education (ENSE).

Public awareness of the impact of Mega Sporting Events on children rights is a recent phenomenon and it shows considerable variation between countries. This research was conducted in order to collect evidence and increase awareness on direct and indirect effects of Mega Sporting Events (MSEs) to mitigate risks and enhance opportunities for children. It outlines differences between 12 countries (Brazil, France, Germany, India, Italy, the Netherlands, Russia, South Africa, Spain, Switzerland, the United States and the United Kingdom), and examines how media covered the Mega Sporting Events (MSEs) and their impact on human rights and particular on children rights.

In a first phase, media resources from the 1st of January to the 31st of December 2014 were scrutinized and peaks as well as lows in media attention were identified and related to three MSEs: the Sochi 2014 Olympic Games, the 2014 FIFA World Cup Brazil(TM) and the Glasgow 2014 Commonwealth Games. In the countries with a high awareness, indirect threats are widely reported and in-depth accounts of mechanisms directly violating children rights, such as poverty or sexual exploitation, are not rare. This leads to the conclusion that the opportunities for promoting children rights in these countries are much better than in countries with minimal awareness.

Concerning the factors, economic as well as structural factors are mentioned most often and relate to the effects of poverty. In most cases, reports on sexual exploitation and child labour mention economic conditions as one of the causal factors. To sum up, the results of this exploratory study raise a lot more questions for future research using different news outlets, different mediums or different countries would help further our understanding of how the media reports on this topic: First, it would be advisable to check the reliability of the results, preferably in the countries of high awareness and therefore presumably more stable patterns. Second, there is a need for more research, e.g. in order to compare the same country as a host and as a non-host country. This survey provides as baseline for future comparison and it will be quite interesting to evaluate the effect against the baseline of these results.

The second phase is focussing on media coverage concerning children rights around the World Youth Olympics in Lillehammer, the Euro in France, the Copa America Centenario in the United States of America and the Summer Olympics 2016 in Rio de Janeiro.

IV.1.10 Leisure- and Tourism Research in European Perspective

IESF staff entrusted with the project:

Diana Wendland, M.A.

Period of research:

2014 - present

Content:

In several research projects at the IESF social, cultural and mental impacts of leisure and tourism during the 20th century are analyzed. The focus of these research activities lies on the development, expansion and transnational dimension of leisure-cultures in Western societies after the Second World War and on the changes of the 1960s and 1970s – in particular on the evolution and consolidation of “mass” and “alternative” tourism and the changes in the field of leisure sports. Since these research activities such as a textbook on tourism history, a workshop and a doctoral thesis on tourism development in the 1970s and 1980s are designed as long term projects, they are able to enhance the strengthening of humanities and social science perspectives on leisure- and tourism research.

The Research Center „local sports policy and development“ (Forschungsstelle Kommunale Sportpolitik und-entwicklung) of the German Sports University Cologne was commissioned by the city of Gelsenkirchen to analyse the sport in Gelsenkirchen in the period from December 2014 to October 2015. The investigation includes the analysis of the particularity of the Gelsensport model as well as the specific situation of the city Gelsenkirchen. The project includes among other things the investigation and classification of the political viability of sport in Gelsenkirchen and the benefits of sport and from Gelsensport for the city. With this the intersectoral concept of sport should be emphasized.

An inventory and analysis of the presently activities of Gelsensport and the analysis of the sport attention through schools and sports associations is implemented with a written survey of all sport associations in Gelsenkirchen and a written survey of the parents of four selected primary schools in Gelsenkirchen Schalke. Additionally, an expert survey is performed with 150 experts of related areas of activity (youth sector, politics, integration, inclusion, senior citizens). To compare the situation of sport and sport associations in Gelsenkirchen with other cities, a project team member (Vanessa Hauert) participated at the first sport association conference in Mannheim, 24th February 2015 (1. Mannheimer Vereinskongress).

The aim of the project Sport development Gelsenkirchen is to develop new practical concepts for the urban development in Gelsenkirchen through sports as well as giving recommendations to optimize the sport in Gelsenkirchen.

IV.1.12 History of Workers' Welfare Association (AWO) 1919 to 2019

Head of the project:

Prof. Dr. Jürgen Mittag

IESF staff entrusted with the project:

N.N.

Period of research:

September 2016-June 2019

Partners:

AWO / Workers' Welfare Association

Content:

Currently a research project is in preparation at German Sport University Cologne, headed by Prof. Dr. Jürgen Mittag, that analyses the history of the workers' welfare association in Germany.

The project targets two key objectives: On the one hand a chronological representation will "narrate" the creation, development and central milestones of the association in a diachronic perspective. On the other hand, a systematic view of central fields of activity of the workers' welfare will be pursued within a chronological presentation. Both fields will add the chronological framework in terms of a problem-oriented approach.

All this will culminate in the overall question whether the formation and development of the workers' welfare were expression or mirror of the political and social framework of the last 100 years. It will also be asked what influence the workers' welfare had itself as a political pioneer of welfare and bearer of social innovation for the social development in Germany.

The objective will be to find out new and unknown approaches and perspectives of the workers' welfare apart from the existing well-known memories and images of the AWO.

IV.1.13 Bourgeois and Trade Unionists: Ludwig Rosenberg

Head of the project at IESF:

Prof. Dr. Jürgen Mittag

IESF staff entrusted with the project:

Dr. Frank Ahland

Period of research:

2011 - 2015

Funding:

Hans-Böckler-Foundation

Content:

The research project is anchored in the area “work and leisure studies” and blends into the shortly recorded upswing of trade unionist biography which may broaden the knowledge of the trade union’s elite in general and inform about trade union history in Germany. In line with this, the project is devoted to the biography of Ludwig Rosenberg.

Although the project is mainly a political, organisational and socio-historical biography one, it contributes to the debate about underlying tendencies of the economic, social and political development of West Germany in the post-war period. Also known as “westernisation”, this development has been applied to unionist history as well.

The biography investigates political problems of the unionists from the 1940s to the 1970s, their scope of action, their internal structures and external relationships and the changes of the union’s societal stance in this period. Finally, it inquires how Rosenberg can be ranged in the trade unionist elite. Of specific interest for IESF’s academic research is the “European role” of Ludwig Rosenberg since he was deeply rooted in several European networks (among others the Monnet’s Action Committee) on the one hand and the discussion about work and leisure at that time in which Rosenberg was engaged on the other.

Rosenberg’s biography conveys deep insights into the internal structures of the umbrella organisation of the unions, the relations between chairpersons of single unions and the president of the federal committee and the organisation of political culture of unions. The publication was issued in May 2016.

IV.1.14 Organised Sport in Mediated Modernity

Head of the project at IESF:
Prof. Dr. Jürgen Mittag

IESF staff entrusted with the project:
Pia Klems (formerly Stemmermann), Daniel Ziesche

Period of research:
2012-2016

Funding:
Internal key research project of the German Sport University

Content:

The project defines Mediated Modernity as the epoch which started with the declaration of the human rights and which is characterized by a growing pluralisation of lifestyles, but also by a “mediatedness” of all personal circumstances. The sector of sports and physical activity is not the only one which changes dramatically during this era, but due to its massive differentiation and its strong connection to other parts of society it stands as a typical example for societal development and therefore works as an instrument for diagnosis of societal change. The goal of the project is a diagnosis of present modern societies communicated (or mediated) by movement cultures.

The colleagues in the sub-project „Organised Sport in Mediated Modernity“ at the institute of European Sports Development and Leisure Studies investigate these changes with regards to sports clubs as the smallest units of organised sport. Thereby, the sports club is considered from a (sport-)political and a (sport-)historical but also from a social scientific perspective with the aim to research the development of the socio-political functions of the sports club as a place and a medium in the process of societal change on a theoretical as well as an empirical level.

Within this framework, Daniel Ziesche researches the changing roles and socio-cultural functions of football clubs in selected regions of England and Germany with the aim of a deeper analysis of processes of change with regards to community formation, identity construction and the generation of social capital. Contemporary historical research is done by Pia Klems regarding the values in the social field of sports clubs. She focuses on the values of a sports club as a seismograph for societal change to analyse the social respectively public welfare functions of sports clubs.

On 20th to 21st of November 2014 the closing session of „Sport der Medialen Moderne“ took place. Throughout the session, first results of the subprojects were critically reflected and put into context. Specifically, focus was drawn towards the overall social changes within the sport and exercise culture.

Working on the subproject „Vereinssport der Medialen Moderne“, the IESF presented sport clubs and sport participation in transition. Targeting both social change within sport clubs as well as the role and function of them, the topic was looked at from a (sport-)historical and (sport-)political point of view.

Sport in Development Policy: Evolution, Approaches and Implementation in Germany

Bauer, Katrin

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2014

With the establishment of the Sector Programme „Sport for Development“ of the German Development Cooperation (GIZ) in early 2013, the German development policy sent a sign of change and reorientation. „Sport for Development“ has become an overarching topic with numerous connections to different development objectives of the Federal German Government. It was recognized that sport is not only an important tool in the educational sector, but also in the areas of health promotion, violence prevention, gender equality, good governance, inclusion or environment. The aim of the project is the determination of the status and the transformation of sport in the development policy of Germany in the past and present.

Biermann, Marie

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2011 - thesis has been submitted supported by the Cusanuswerk: Bischöfliche Studienförderung

The research project is embedded in the broader field of sport-for-development and is located in Cape Town, South Africa in two different projects. Both projects aim at life-skill development but are different in structure and program. The research takes place while the intervention is still ongoing, with the data being collected from February till July 2013 and February till July 2014. The projects are not only being analysed in terms of their effectiveness and processes with regard to life-skill development but also concerning the methods used for evaluating the interventions. What are the effects of sport-based life-skill programs on youths? How do these effects come about? Which processes underlie them? What conditions are necessary for sport-based life-skill programs to have beneficial outcomes? In order to answer these questions two qualitative methods, the 'Most Significant Change' method and participant observation, are applied, as well as quantitative approaches. All of them are used complementary to assure triangulation, increasing reliability and validity of measures, and also getting insights into the same sociological phenomenon from different perspectives. Is there a difference in the appropriateness of the methods used to identify processes? Is there a difference in the appropriateness of the methods concerning the different projects and programs? The methods themselves are also analysed concerning their useful application in different programs and fields. So far, the MSC-method and participant observation have successfully been applied in areas outside sport and imply a potential for innovations in the area of monitoring and evaluating sport-in-development projects.

The Relations of Governmental and Non-Governmental Sport Politics in Germany and France

Fischer, Christoph

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2009

The fundamental question of the research project concerns the similarities and differences between the German and the French sport system referring to the cooperation and the reciprocal understanding of governmental and non-governmental institutions of sport administration and aims on defining their characteristics. The empirical proceeding is based on an analysis of the legal foundations of each system. This includes statutes, regulations, statutes of clubs and federations, target agreements and other bilateral settlements as well as the structures and construction of each sport system and interrogations of experts and representatives of governmental and non-governmental institutions of Germany and France. The paper aims to extend and refine the existent structural and political comparisons in sport sciences. Against the backdrop of political science approaches of pluralism and neo-corporatism, the results of the empirical research will be discussed with a special focus on the features of sport as a sector of the society.

„No Normal Sport in an Abnormal Society“: Characteristics, Achievements and Limitations of Protests in Sport Against the Apartheid Regime in South Africa

Hangebrauck, Jan

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2013

The dissertation refers to the field of transnational history (of sport) and analyses the effects of the protests in sport in South Africa but also in the Federal Republic of Germany, in the German Democratic Republic and in the United Kingdom against the apartheid regime. The work will focus on the investigation of the 1960s, 1970s and 1980s, beginning with the Sharpeville massacre, which led to a massive increase and radicalization of protest against the apartheid regime, and ending with the first democratic elections in South Africa in April 1994, which sealed the end of apartheid.

Due to a lack of literature on the effects of protests in sport during the end of the apartheid regime, the study aims to identify variables for the effects of protests with the help of archival studies in the above mentioned countries and with the use of qualitative interviews, mainly with sport officials and former athletes. It will be the purpose of the thesis to offer new insights into the impact of protests in sport. In that way the work intends to contribute to intensified linkages in the academic fields of the history of sports, of sport sociology and of sport politics.

Sport Clubs and Sport Values in Change

Klems, Pia

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2012

The importance of a sport club is based on its memberships, its resources and its financial possibilities. Mostly disregarded are the values within a sports club. Sports clubs stand for an internal and external integration of certain values. These values are an important aspect of modern society and take an impact on public life. The individual adapts certain values from other social contexts and introduces them in a sports club. The question of influence and meaning of values within a sports club on and for the individual, the society and the state can be raised. Within the context of this thesis the change of values in the Ruhr area is of special interest. The panel study of values in a sports club is based on sources of chosen sports clubs. Sources are literature produced by the sports club, such as celebratory publications, club papers or charters.

European Commission and Sport: Increasing “Centralism” or “Spill-Over” in a Multi-Level-Governance-System?

Kornbeck, Jacob

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2009

As a PhD by published work, this thesis aims to revisit the activities of the European Commission (in particular but not exclusively within the years 2001-2011) to find evidence of a diversification of the sport policy field. This allows for a feedback loop towards two fundamental theoretical positions of European integration and relevant research: spillover as used in federalism/neo-functionalism as well as multi-level governance. Empirical evidence is provided through 15 already published papers within three problem areas: EU-sport articulation; anti-doping; Health-Enhancing Physical Activity (HEPA). The exercise of critically revisiting these papers was inspired theoretically by the model of the reflective practitioner.

„... and for the Honor of our Nation(s)”: German Olympic Policy between 1960 and 1968

Lippmann, Karsten

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2012 - thesis has been submitted

This graduate thesis deals with the sports policy of both German states during the years 1960 to 1968. It is looked at as part of the intra-German policy. For this reason the thesis focusses on Olympic subjects.

To describe adequately what was going on in these years, Kleßmanns concept of asymmetric intertwined parallel history is extended with elements of the theory of dynamic transaction that was developed by Früh to describe the effects of media. The concept of dynamic intertwined history of communication, which emerged this way, gives us the opportunity to look at the eight perhaps most eventful years of German sports history and to see it as a result of intersecting actions and reactions. The first goal on this process was to gain influence on the I.O.C. Both German states were successful in this respect. The FRG became the Olympic host in 1972, and in Munich the GDR received the right to use their own national symbols during the summer games for the first time.

This graduate thesis describes the way that led to this solution, which satisfied both sides, but made neither of them really happy.

Changes in youth development programs in Basketball in Germany, Lithuania and Spain since 1995: Governance between Europeanization and Globalization?

Melzer, Marius

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2012

Since November 2012 Marius Melzer focuses on the changes in youth development programs in Basketball in Germany, Lithuania and Spain. With a combination of theoretical approaches coming from Sports Europeanization, Sports Globalization and Sports Governance, he aims to discover how the increase of the possibilities to recruit basketball players has affected the youth development programs in these countries. Melzer sees the starting point of an intensification of the national youth development programs in the Bosman-ruling of the European Court of Justice, but the core of the developments in the interaction between the national federation and the first league clubs. Therefore, Melzer has analyzed the governance arrangement between these actors to find out why Spain and Lithuania constantly promote more young players than Germany.

"Spiritual Coaching": Theological, Social Science and Sport Science Perspectives on a New Occupational Area

Micic, Michael

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2011

Aim of this interdisciplinary project is to analyse moral concepts, ideals and lifestyle of professional soccer players in order to disclose the influence of the mentioned factors on their wellbeing and sport performance. Furthermore, the research focuses on deriving a "Spiritual and Life Coaching" model for the professional German soccer within reflecting the boundaries and possibilities of such a coaching model. As in the English and Brazilian soccer spiritual coaching by so called "Sport Chaplains" is already set in praxis, existent analyses of this area are used to develop the model. The collection of data in professional German soccer clubs is done by interviews with officials and players.

Impacts of Sport on the Regime Changes and Transformation Processes in Iraq and Egypt

Ousu, Ali

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2012

Sport fulfils numerous functions between state and society. Sport serves in particular to form national group identities, fosters international understanding, enhances cooperation and exposes the individual. Although sport is a widely autonomous system that follows specific rules and dynamics, it is open to the allocation of meanings and new functions, but also to societal changes. The ongoing revolutions in the Arabic world will not only impact the society, but also the sports system by changing the framing circumstances and the functions or meanings of sport. The dissertation wants to consider and analyse these changes of the sport system among the current societal and political transformations.

Sport for Development (SFD) in South Korea: An Analysis of Process of Sport Policy Change and Evaluation of SFD Programmes

Park, Jongchul

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2016

In recent years, sport is considered as a practical vehicle to deal with social, cultural, and economic issues around the world. In particular, diverse sport programmes have been emerged to achieve the initiatives created by the United Nations' Millennium Development Goals. These initiatives are commonly called Sport for Development (SFD) programme or movement. SFD programmes are concerned with sport participation, gender, socialisation, and education issues, and are directly related to children, women, disabled, and disadvantaged people. The implement of SFD is generally practiced by global North toward the global South, but several developing nations have recently implemented SFD programmes. This means that implementing SFD actions to promote social change is considered as a global trend around the world. South Korea has become a sports power in the world with the help of huge investment in elite athlete development system and successful holding mega event such as the 1988 Olympic Games and the 2002 FIFA World Cup. In addition, South Korea is a country of the unique example whose status has changed from an aid-recipient country to a donor country. As a result, Korean government has been trying to have interest in international outreach and cooperation through sports programmes. For instance, Dream Together programme and Dream programme have been implemented as a part of SFD action in South Korea. Despite increasing interests in SFD programmes, however, Korean sport policy in relation to SFD programmes tends to be political and short-termism for hosting mega event. Also, there has been little research for analysing change process of sport policy on SFD movement in South Korea compared to research, such as school sport, elite sport, and sport for all. In addition, the absence of scientific evidence of how sport activities contribute to dealing with social issues still indicates a significant gap between theory and practice. Therefore, the aim of this thesis is to explore the change process of sport policy in South Korea in relation to Sport for Development (SFD). In addition, the thesis aims to evaluate and analyse Korean SFD programmes on the basis of Sport for Development Theory (SFDT), and then identify distinctive features of Korean SFD compared to international current SFD movement. Lastly, the thesis will pursue to suggest direction of improvement regarding SFD in South Korea.

Sport-Political Structures, Contents and Processes of the Spanish Sport System

Putzmann, Ninja

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2012

In the European area numerous journals and articles offer an overview about the development of national sport policies and describe the institutional structures of sport, organizational and financial framework conditions. Nevertheless, empiric-analytic nation studies to explain correlations between sport structures, processes and contents are missing as well as a theoretical fundament to analyse sport systems. Deriving from the central question for the characteristic sport-political structures, processes and contents of the Spanish sport system, three subordinated goals are defined: Firstly, the investigation of the theoretic-conceptual level by an adaption of the political scientific system theory including the terms of sport polity, sport politics and sport policy for the sport system of Spain as well as the effects of Europeanisation. Secondly on the typological level theoretically founded categories or typologies are developed to analyse the Spanish sport system. Focusing on some exemplary regions, the applicability of those typologies is empirically tested. Thirdly the empiric-analytic level is examined by sequencing and summarising of new and existent data about the Spanish sport system respecting special characteristics of single regions of Spain to relate sport political structures, processes and contents. Perspectively, the elaborated categories can be used to enable a comparison of distinguished European sport systems what implies a certain degree of generalisation.

Anti-Doping-Politics in the Federal Republic of Germany

Risse, Gunnar

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2012

The project uses the theoretical and methodological instruments of political science to deal with the developments in the fight against doping in Germany, beginning in 1990. While findings from applied economics, sociology and history are taken as a starting point, the main aim of the analysis is to describe and understand the relationship and goals of different actors in the field of anti-doping-policy, using the framework of actor-centered institutionalism. To explain the influence of single actors, the project refers to a multi-dimensional theory of power. In addition, key ideas from political network-analysis, Tsebelis' thoughts on veto-players and some basic components of the principal-agent-approach are taken into consideration. To gather information about the object of investigation, the study uses content-analysis as well as semi-structured guided interviews with policy-makers and decision-makers from sport organisations. It is the purpose of the study to systematically describe past developments, understand the current situation and develop different scenarios for the future with regard to their likeliness.

Changing Sport-policies in the Ukraine

Ulyanov, Illya

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2012

The aim of the scientific thesis is to analyse the Ukrainian sport policy, their structures and the processes which exerted influence on the development of mass sport and leisure sport. The focus of the research lies on the governmental programmes and organisational measures which promote sport as well as the development of mass sport, leisure sport and the sport participation of the Ukrainian people. Since the independence of the Ukraine in the year 1991, numerous/ various measures were initiated to promote mass sport and leisure sport. These initiatives are analysed in this work with regard to their successes and limits. This consideration is complemented by investigations concerning sustainability of the initiated measures. Finally, as a result of the previous steps, the efficiency and capability of the Ukrainian sport policy shall be presented exemplarily. The study refers to political and legal conditions by taking the historical and social characteristics of the country into account. Additionally, external factors, which influence the development of the mass sport and leisure sport directly or indirectly, are part of the analysis as well as the recent political and social events in the Ukraine in 2014.

A different gaze? Alternative tourism in the light of individual hiking and trekking guidebooks

Wendland, Diana

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2014

Since the origin of tourism in the 19th century modern tourists have been consuming certain „sights“ on their journey: With the cultural studies by Ueli Gyr and John Urry this symbolic consumption was considered as an essence of modern tourism. Younger cultural-historical studies have examined these gazes in detail. They mostly analysed changes in the (visual) symbolic consumption in different phases of tourism development – especially from the middle-class tourism of the 19th century to the mass tourism of the 1960s and 1970s. The findings of these studies have shown that the romantic gaze of the bourgeoisie was replaced by a collective, sociable gaze of mass tourism. However, these studies have not examined the tourist gaze of alternative tourism in the 1970s and 1980s. The planned doctoral thesis will analyze the “alternative” gaze using alternative travel guides as “a visual school” (Müller 2012). The research question aims at asking whether an alternative gaze can be identified in alternative travel guides and whether such an alternative gaze can be apprehended by the dichotomy between “romantically” and “sociably” characterised. It will be shown in how far the analysis of alternative travel guides can be useful for the (media)-culture history of tourism, but also for the history of the alternative environment or for contemporary historical research about the decades “after the boom”.

Youth Sport Policy in Europe

Ursula Witzani

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2016

The health and physical activity of children and teenager currently counts as polarizing topic. Nowadays, the topic children and youth sport - as the foundation of long-lasting physical activity – fills political agendas in Europe. Thereby the missing structures or the lacking cooperation between various stakeholder are criticized. Until now, the scientific research shows a reluctance to this research field. A cross-national comparison, concentrated on the structures and system of youth sport, does not yet exist. The aim of the planned Doctoral Thesis lies within a systematic analysis of the multi-dimensional and complex policy field youth sport and a comparison at multinational level. Concretely the differences of the selected countries are examined and analyzed, in view of the to be investigated criteria in the youth sport area. Besides the multinational analysis and the consideration on supranational level, the policy field youth sport will be set in a European context and will be discussed with regard to the Europeanization approach. Methodologically a literature and documentary inquiry will be conducted as groundwork. Building on this, expert interviews will be undertaken which will be evaluated with qualitative content analysis. Through theory and methodology, an applicable categorization should be developed to be able to investigate European youth sport system with a holistic design. Consequently, the expected results should display not only an empirical but also theoretical relevance. Furthermore, the research should induce to further research, as well as should provide profitable implications for the investigated countries.

Organised Sport in Transition: Social and Cultural Functions of Football Clubs in England and Germany

Ziesche, Daniel

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, since 2012

The various transformational processes which shape modern societies (e.g. globalisation, individualisation, and urbanisation) present football clubs (and sport clubs in general) with critical challenges with regards to their future development. Likewise, the self-proclaimed functions which sport clubs allegedly traditionally fulfil are being increasingly questioned. Against the backdrop of an ongoing regional structural transformation – along with a shifting social structure within the geographical sphere of influence of the clubs – the project raises the question in how far roles and functions of football clubs have changed and how resistant or adaptable clubs present themselves in view of those transformational processes. The project thereby focuses on transformational dimensions within three functional fields which football clubs allegedly fulfil: Collective identity construction, community building, and the generating of social capital (understood both in Putnam's and Bourdieu's tradition). The qualitative analysis will investigate football clubs from regions in England and Germany which have been subject to severe structural change that confronts the football clubs in these regions with formidable challenges. The investigated clubs are playing at the fourth and fifth level of the league pyramid. Firstly, because at this level strong club-internal tensions are presumed with regards to the future alignment of the clubs; secondly, because football research tends to focus on the top tiers of the league system and widely neglects non-league football. The project at hand intends to contribute to the closing of this blind spot in research. Main objectives of the project are on one side to expose how regional localisation and differences in the structural organisation of football clubs have repercussions on the adaptive abilities of these clubs. On the other side, alleged functions of football clubs for modern societies are expected to be proven or to be refuted which would allow for the delivering of a theoretical framework. On this basis a further and deeper-reaching analysis of social and cultural functions of clubs could be achieved.

The Role of the Asian Football Confederation

Weinberg, Ben

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, 2010-2013

Football is the most popular sport in the world. However, globalisation and commercialisation of the game have also created new conflicts and challenges in football and politics. The thesis explores the role of the Asian Football Confederation (the AFC) within the rising significance of the football in Asia, drawing on three key theoretical perspectives: globalisation, neoinstitutionalism and governance, as well as comprehensive data from interviews and archive material. It explores the organisational structure of the AFC, its decision making processes, relations with other actors and policies put forward. To understand the specificities AFC has faced in its 60-year history, the broader historical, political, economic, socio-cultural and geographic contexts of football in Asia are taken into account.

Integration in Sports Clubs: Development of a social science-based Quality Management Model

Schädler, Timo

Cologne: Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln, 2012 - 2016

This thesis intends the development of a social science-based QM-Model for integration processes in Sports Clubs. Applications are explained in a functional context. The work study aims to contribute to a topical and problem-related interdisciplinary discourse of political science, sociology, education and business administration in the overall context of sports science. The objective is to develop a systematic theory-based QM-Model that helps to visualize and realize integration processes in a sports club and beyond to areas of society. The heterogeneity of the sporting sector with its different orientation and directions of integration policies encourage the development of a model that can meet these requirements at an appropriate level of abstraction. The development of the QM-Model for integration is carried out in close context of theoretical foundation and practical relevance.

V. Conferences and Events

During the period 2015/2016 the members of IESF took part in various conferences and symposia. One conference was organized at the institut in Cologne:

Small Worlds - Football at the grass roots in a comparative European and global perspective

Date:

12.-13.09.2015

Place:

German Sport University Cologne

Although football increasingly attracts the attention of cultural historians, sociologists and social scientists more generally, research to date has focused largely on the elite professional game. Those who participate at lower levels – from non-elite amateur level to street football – have been largely neglected.

Against this backdrop, the workshop brought together experts from various European countries with a mutual interest in grass-roots football. The intention was to establish a framework of discussion that will facilitate and encourage international and interdisciplinary co-operation and innovative approach more generally.

The workshop was open to academics, students and people generally interested.
