1. PREFACE

Sports politics is booming. Hardly any day passes without a public debate on the political dimension of sport and the linkages between sport and politics. The Institute of European Sport Development and Leisure Studies addresses and analyses these developments critically.

In addition to academic conferences (most recently the symposium on disabled sports) and publications (most recently on the informal dimension of sport), the Institute of European Sport Development and Leisure Studies also contributes to academic teaching (above all the courses of the Master's programme on International Sport Development and Politics) and several academic projects carried out jointly with academic partners. All these dimensions are documented in this 8th Jean Monnet Report covering the period from August 2018 to July 2019. Our strive for interesting insights is linked with the invitation to foster dialogue with the institute and to participate in its activities.

Cologne, August 2019
Jürgen Mittag

2. MISSION STATEMENT

The Institute of European Sport Development and Leisure Studies and its Jean Monnet Chair are contributing to the European dimension of sport in particular and to the international development of sport structures in general.

They are part of the German Sport University Cologne (GSU), one of the largest specialised universities world-wide as academic centre of teaching and research in physical education and sport science. In modern facilities, more than 30 sports are taught at 21 academic departments in theory and practice. Around 5,500 students, including 350 foreign students, are studying at the GSU, which offers academic Bachelor's and Master's degrees, teaching certificates for various school levels and doctoral degrees.

The ongoing interdependence of sport and other societal fields, the increasing economic power of sport, the growing influence of governmental and non-governmental actors on the organisation of sport, its framework, and the continuing Europeanisation and globalisation have increased the importance of sport politics. However, the development of a political science inspired approach to sport and the formation of a particular branch addressing the broad range of sport-related political issues are still at the very beginning.

Against this background, activities of the IESF aim to cooperate with national and international academics in order to bring together findings from political, social and sport sciences. The overall goal is to illustrate the specific core of sport political action by taking into account the three dimensions polity (structural-institutional), politics (procedural) and policy (content-related). For all dimensions, it is important not only to consider the horizontal differentiation between autonomy and governmental regulation, but also the vertical differentiation between local, regional, national, European and international levels, to meet the needs of a sport political multi-level system. This view is mirrored in the two main research areas of the Institute: national, European and international sport systems and politics and the role of sport in international development cooperation.

FIELD TRIP BRUSSELS 2019

Hands on European Sport Politics: Institutions, Organizations and Political Process in Brussels

The field-trip to Brussels is a longstanding favorite for students and staff. The tour combines theory and practice and offers valuable insights into the work of the EU. The concept of the excursion, which was changed in 2018, was adopted in 2019. The three day tour with several visits such as Parliament, Council, different branches of the Commission, the European Olympic Committees and the European House of Sports as well as some touristic program was valued by the students as a great enrichment of their everyday studies.

3.2 FINAL THESES IN 2018/19

3.4 MASTER PROGRAMME: INTERNATIONAL SPORT DEVELOPMENT AND POLITICS

The M.A. programme „International Sport Development and Politics“ directed by the Institute of European Sport Development and Leisure Studies and the Institute of Sport History at the German Sport University Cologne is designed primarily for graduates of sports, social sciences and humanities who have a strong interest in the political, cultural, economic and social aspects of sport. Due to the interdisciplinary nature of the master program and its diversity requirements, it is also open to applicants from other disciplines.

Aiming at a comprehensive understanding of structures, actors and conflicts in sport and physical activity, it provides an international focus on sport, including transnational and comparative dimensions. In order to obtain a profound knowledge and understanding of sport in its political, social, cultural and economic framework, the program combines sport sciences with humanities, social sciences and economics. The programme is highly research oriented and fosters problem-solving capacities as well as methods for understanding and analyzing sport.

The third intake started its studies in October 2018. From a broad and international field of approx. 80 applicants, 26 students were selected. The group includes 18 male and 8 female participants. The academic backgrounds of the group are very diverse. Eight of the 28 students studied a management related undergraduate degree including sport management. Another eight studied political science degrees also including international relations, whereas four come from a sociological background.

The majority of students come from Europe with 15 Germans and three students from other EU countries (Hungary, Spain, and Sweden). With regards to the geographical distribution across the globe, the Asian (6), African (1) and North American (1) continents are represented in the group.

As a result of the constant and ongoing endeavor to improve the programme, several changes in the study plan and in the composition of modules have taken place in 2018 and 2019. Furthermore, internal and external marketing activities have been advanced including a closer collaboration with the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD) which attracts many international applicants.

A large portion of the first intake has successfully completed its degree and has found its way into ambitious and key positions in sports organizations and related entities on the different levels. Seeing these first successes as well as the general growing importance of political thinking and acting in sports, the programme directors are convinced that the programme will continue to equip future leaders and gain importance in the academic and professional sphere.

4. PROJECTS

4.1 ERASMUS+ PEAK - Policy, Evidence and Knowledge in Coaching

The primary objective of the PEAK project is to promote and support good governance in sport by preparing a set of coaching policy recommendations for use by national and European sport federations, coaching bodies and governments. The project is unique and unprecedented – indeed, it is the first time that leading international and national agencies for sport and sports coaching have united to address one of the most urgent concerns in sport, namely the good governance of coaching. Coaching policies often lack a guiding framework and, that despite its importance for young people and athletes across Europe, coaching is typically unregulated. The project will be an important step in strengthening the policy foundations of sports coaching in Europe and beyond.

As part of a consortium of expert organisations in the area of coaching, the German Sport University will provide research support to the project, namely by mapping out the current state of coaching governance and regulation across Europe, especially as it relates to the overall coaching systems, as well as to the topics of volunteering, women in coaching and the regulation of coaching.

4.2 ERASMUS+ Intercultural Education through Physical Activity, Coaching and Training (EDU-PACT)

Coordinated by the University of Vienna, this project targets a major, current societal problem: The migrant and refugee crisis in Europe. The consistent migrant flow towards Europe poses new cultural challenges across all European societies. Regardless of what is done to handle this situation, it is clear that a great number of people, including children, will need to be integrated and welcomed into our societies. Schools as well as sport clubs are an important vehicle to facilitate this integration.

However, teachers and schools are often under-resourced and under-funded to deal with the new challenges posed by this situation. The objective of the project is to help address these challenges and to develop innovative, evidence-based intercultural pedagogy in physical education and coaching. This pedagogy will be namely based on the extensive hands-on experience from two reputed international NGOs: Right to Play (RTP) and the Vienna Institute of International Dialogue and Cooperation (VIDC). The EDU-PACT project will develop sustainable approaches in order to equip physical education teachers as well as coaches with inclusive, intercultural behaviour.

4.3 ERASMUS+ Blueprint for Skills Cooperation and Employment in Active Leisure

The active leisure sector, including the fitness and outdoor sectors, has intensively worked on its own skills agenda in recent years. It recognises the importance of the need for an implementation plan based on the policy recommendations of the Expert Group on Human Resources Development and EU New Skills Agenda. Accordingly, the Blueprint for Skills Cooperation and Employment in Active Leisure project focuses on developing new skills for current and future workers, improving employability of young people, and supporting entrepreneurship and growth across the sector.

The project brings together leading actors in a formidable partnership of expertise to implement the project, which includes the development of a skills survey to identify gaps and shortages, an analysis of the challenges and opportunities within current qualification structures, and the development of new, European-level qualifications.

The project will especially reflect on the changing roles of fitness and outdoor workers in developing skills to meet new digital technologies, promoting health-enhancing physical activity (sometimes with other healthcare professionals), and working with special population groups.

The IESF, through the affiliated European Network of Sport Education (ENSE), will lead the mapping of the European active leisure sector, especially as it relates to the status and awarding of qualifications.

4.4 ERASMUS+ NADGO - National Anti-Doping Governance Observer

National Anti-Doping Governance Observer: Benchmarking Governance in National Anti-Doping Organisations' (NADGO) will aim to assist national anti-doping organisations (NADOs) in raising the quality of their governance and promote independent practices free from conflicts of interests.

Firstly, through a mapping of the current structures, practices, challenges and weaknesses of governance in the field of anti-doping and secondly, by developing a code of good governance and a practical benchmarking tool that can be used to evaluate NADOs performance on good governance parameters.

Through the code of good governance, the project will deliver specific assistance in addressing good governance deficits by showing best practice examples of crucial documents and through two workshops within the wider community of NADOs.

4.5 National Sports Governance Observer: Benchmarking sports governance across national boundaries

The main aim of SGO 2017: 'National Sports Governance Observer: Benchmarking sports governance across national boundaries' is to assist and inspire national sports organisations to raise the quality of their governance practices. The project involves in the first instance the partners included in the Erasmus+ application and will try to attach partners from third countries inside and outside the EU in the course of 2017 and 2018. More specifically, the project sets out to enable sports leaders and outside stakeholders to measure, discuss and amend the governance standards and practices of sports organisations by adapting and applying the Sports Governance Observer benchmarking tool in national sports organisations.

4.6 ERASMUS+ EU Football Agents: Promoting and Supporting Good Governance in the European Football Agents Industry

The project aim is to promote and support good governance in the context of the regulation of football players' agents in the EU. The research will result in meaningful policy impact by informing how private actors and public actors will approach the issue of agent regulation in the future. By extension, the research will inform the approach taken by other sports to the question of player agent regulation. The issue of good governance is relevant due to longstanding concerns regarding the operation of the player agent industry. As acknowledged by successive EU documents, these concerns tend to be of an ethical and legal nature including financial crime and the exploitation of young players. These issues threaten the fairness of sporting competitions and the integrity of sportspeople. The issue is of particular current relevance given recent changes to the way in which football agents are regulated.

4.7 Comparison of National Sport Systems in Europe: Concepts, Models and Theories

The aim of this project is to develop variables, indicators and explanations to characterise national sport systems. There will be a shift of focus from formal sport and political actors as well as legal frameworks towards dynamic sport policy processes and their outputs. By this, new perspectives of the relationships and interdependencies between sport and politics will be gained.

Since 2018, a new network for a closer cooperation of academics who work in the emerging field of sport politics or who deal with political issues related to sport is created. Named POLIS, it stands for Policy and Politics In Sport.

The first network-meeting of POLIS has successfully taken place in Cologne. It was the objective of the workshop to explore further perspectives in this field. In addition to disciplinary, methodological and theoretical aspects particular attention has been given to comparative studies in sport politics. The workshop has not just produced inspiring discussions but also provoked concrete activities that will be carried out in the next months.

4.8 SPOR TED – Sport and Politics Organisations, Regulations and Themes in the European Dimension

Having been honored with the Jean Monnet title the institute and its chairholder are constantly aiming at deepening the academic linkage between sport and EU politics. After a series of academic conferences on European sport politics (e.g. the Sport & EU conference 2014) and the implementation of new teaching activities (e.g. the new Master program on “International Sport Development and Politics”) the institute has most recently issued several publications (e.g. “Europäische Sportpolitik” published by Nomos and the annual contributions to the Yearbook of European integration on European sport politics). It is planned to deepen these activities by fostering formal teaching cooperation at the European level. In addition the support of European academic networks will be enhanced such as Sport&EU and POLIS.

4.9 Scientific Monitoring of the Sector Programme „Sport for development“

In recent years individual sport-related measures have been carried out repeatedly in the German Development Cooperation; this issue was, however, never systematic and fully established.

For this reason the Federal Ministry of Economic Cooperation and Development (BMZ) established a project sector on the subject in order to bring together the experience and cooperate in the German contribution to „Sport and Development“. The Sector Programme “sport for development” is anchored within the Deutsche Gesellschaft für Internationale Zusammenarbeit (GIZ) GmbH, which as a federal enterprise supports the government in achieving its objectives in the international Development Cooperation and bringing them into action.

The IESF is involved as a scientific institution in consultation, monitoring and evaluation processes. The development, implementation and evaluation of empirical studies in different countries, as well as the development of theory-based foundation documents about “Sport for Development” are, among others, tasks of the institute.

4.10 Scientific support of long-term sport projects of the DOSB in Botswana und Gambia

Since the early 1960s, German sports organizations have been promoting the development of sport in developing and emerging countries. As part of the International Sports Promotion of the DOSB, more than 1,500 long-term and short-term measures have been carried out worldwide in more than 130 countries.

Since October 2018 in the Gambia and February 2019 in Botswana, the DOSB, in cooperation with experts and local partners, has implemented two new long-term projects which focus on the creation of local and sport-specific structures that are needed to promote sport.

Football is highly valued in both countries and has developed significantly in recent years. In Gambia, the focus is on training multipliers and advising associations and coaches in the field of women’s and girls’ football. The Botswana project aims to advance football, both in men’s and women’s football, at all levels of association, to train both trainers and sports teachers as well as to build and expand structures.

The projects are supported and strategically monitored by the Institute for European Sport Development and Leisure Studies through scientific support and the associated method-based evaluation (monitoring). The following areas will be covered and supported: the development of impact models, indicators and milestones; advice to partners regarding the establishment of sustainable structures; Preparation of M&E instruments (inter alia for measuring their effects); Analysis of all conducted surveys; Preparation of interim and overall reports as well as the final evaluation of the project.

4.11 Research Centre on Chinese-European Sport Politics

The fast and dynamic development of Asia attracts the interest of the media and the academic world alike. Though sport has not been the centre of attention, the reflection on Asian – and in particular on Chinese – sport development promises important insights. Against this backdrop, the Institute of European Sport Development and Leisure Studies aims at deepening the transnational cooperation in sport related research between Asia and Europe. Major fields of interest are the areas of economics, elite sports and urban planning/health/grassroots sport as well as civil society.

In 2017 the international conference „Changing Sports Development: China and Europe: Inventories, Case Studies and Interactions“ took place in December. In 2018 the centre welcomed 13 students from China for the 2nd Summer School on Tourism and Leisure. In 2019 the 3rd Summer School took place successfully.

4.12 History of Workers' Welfare Association (AWO) 1919 to 2019

In December 2019, the 100th anniversary of the “Arbeiterwohlfahrt” (AWO) - founded by social democrats after the First World War - will be celebrated. The goal of the project is a well-readable and carefully illustrated study on the multilayered history of this particular organisation. The project is based on research in different historical archives, on primary sources such as contemporary newspapers or annual reports and on the many existing academic and commemorative publications.

The study will be structured largely chronological. The focus will be laid on the prehistory of charity work by social democrats in the German Kaiserreich and during the First World War as well as the foundation as a committee of the SPD in 1919. Examples and explanations for the rapid growth and expansion of its activities during the Weimar Republic will be presented. After 1945, AWO was reestablished as an independent welfare association but maintained close links to the SPD. The welfare sector experienced an unprecedented expansion in the postwar economic revival. In the 1970s and 1980s, the voluntary social engagement and AWO membership reached a peak. During the 1990s, the organisation successfully expanded to Eastern Germany but also had to implement necessary structural reforms under increasingly difficult economic circumstances. The study will try to analyse the fundamental changes including testimonies and their reports in order to answer the general question if and when the AWO was a pioneer of societal change or reacted primarily on external influences.

4.13 Sports History of the Ruhr Area - The Way to the Sports Metropole Ruhr in North Rhine-Westphalia

The debate about the bid of the „Rhein Ruhr City 2032“ for the Olympic Games of the year 2032 is currently leading to intensified debates about the importance of sport in the region of North Rhine-Westphalia. In this context, the focus is not only on the public's agreement to hosting a sports mega-event such as the Olympic Games, but also on the question of the roots and development lines of sport on the Rhine and Ruhr.

The Ruhr area in particular is considered one of the most important football centres in the world. However, the strong presence of football obscures the view of the sports landscape of the Ruhr area and contributes to the fact that the diverse sports history of the region has almost fallen into oblivion. Whether six-day races or boxing competitions, whether Ruhrolympiade or World Games, whether Olympic champions or world champions: numerous competitions, events and people from the sporting history of the Ruhr region have fallen into oblivion. This also applies to numerous clubs and sports facilities. The IESF is currently pursuing - in cooperation with the History of the Ruhr Area Foundation - a project to research and analyse the fundamentals of regional sports structures with the aim of working through fundamental stages in the sports development of the Ruhr Area and the North Rhine-Westphalia region. In the sense of a double objective, both the scientific processing and the public visibility are to be taken into account.

4.14 The „Bolzplatz“ as Place of Memory

The „Bolzplatz“ is not only known as a general term, but is also widespread in urban areas. However, there is neither a universally accepted definition of the „Bolzplatz“ (amateur football field) nor a comprehensive understanding of its social significance. Science has also paid only limited attention to the football field.

The IESF is currently working on a study with a double objective: On the one hand, it represents a material inventory of the term „Bolzplatz“. The attempt is made to grasp the football field as a material place of play and sport more concretely, to examine it with regard to its distribution and design and, last but not least, to determine differences such as similarities in the development of football fields from a synchronous and diachronic perspective. What is largely new here is the approach of investigating the „Bolzplatz“ as a specific variant of child and youth policy in urban public spaces. On the other hand, this study examines the importance and social function of the „Bolzplatz“ in more detail and thus examines its immaterial dimension more closely. Particular attention will be paid to the youth cultural dimension of the „Bolzplatz“ and its development in the context of social change.

4.15 Audience research

Until the beginning of the 1970s, little was known about the audience of sporting events. Dr. Hans Stollenwerk is a research pioneer, who developed this field scientifically. He and his team have investigated changes such as the composition, behavior, motives and desires of sport audiences, as well as changing aspects of marketing of sporting events and put them in a general societal context. The studies are based on aspects of different sciences such as leisure research, sociology, social psychology and sports economics. Additionally, international sports events have been included in the investigations.

4.16 Leisure and Tourism Research in European Perspective

The IESF pays particular attention to the development of work and leisure in the history of Europe. Against the backdrop of social, cultural and economic changes in work and leisure, several studies explore the evolution and consolidation of “mass” and “alternative” tourism and the ongoing changes in the field of leisure sports. The dissertation of Diana Wendland, submitted in 2018, has contributed to the development and impact of alternative travel guides as a visual school of tourism gaze. The study on “representation of work” published in 2018 by the FES has deepened the means and media of changes in the world of work. In addition, several talks on work and leisure have been given in 2018 for instance at the conference „Muße und Arbeit“ – „Otiose Leisure and Work“ in Freiburg. Next step will be a textbook on tourism history that enhanced the humanities and social science perspectives on leisure and tourism research.

6. CONFERENCES AND EVENTS

During the period 2018/2019, the IESF was in charge of organizing several conferences.

9th Symposium on Sports Politics: Disabled Sport

Public perception of disabled sport has so far been limited. Only during the Paralympic Games, following the Summer Games in Rio and the Winter Games in Pyeongchang, the media and the public briefly focuses on disabled sports. In this context, the question of classifications in disabled sports and the decision of the International Paralympic Committee (IPC) to suspend Russia attracted more attention, as disabled sport is attributed an important role in the debate on values in sport. Overall little is known about the basic structures, actors and areas of conflict of disabled sport.

The Paralympics are only one facet of major events in disabled sport. Deaf people compete in the Deaf Olympics, mentally handicapped people in the Special Olympics. The structures of other important areas, such as rehabilitation sports, are - despite the of some recently published scientific research - also rarely in the field of vision.

Against this background, the 9th Symposium on Sports Policy deals with the development and structures of sports policy for the disabled. Within the framework of the symposium, experts from sports policy and association research will come together with representatives from sports policy and organizations to discuss which policy the National Paralympic Committee Germany (DBS) pursues, which cooperation with federal ministries is pursued, which developments are taking place in the international arena and to what extent the inclusion concept in sport is taken into account.

Forum Sportpolitik

Der Behindertensport in sportpolitischer Perspektive

In der öffentlichen Wahrnehmung hat der Behindertensport bislang nur begrenzte Beachtung gefunden. Lediglich im Zuge der Paralympics richtet sich, wie zuletzt bei den Sommerspielen in Rio und den Winterspielen in Pyeongchang, der Blick von Medien und Öffentlichkeit kurzzeitig auf den Behindertensport. Sportpolitisch erregte in diesem Zusammenhang die Frage der Klassifizierungen im Behindertensport sowie die Entscheidung des International Paralympic Committee (IPC) zur Suspendierung Russlands stärkere Aufmerksamkeit, da dem Behindertensport eine wichtige Rolle in der Debatte über Werte im Sport zugesprochen wurde.

Insgesamt ist jedoch über die grundlegenden Strukturen, Akteure und Konfliktfelder des Behindertensports nur wenig bekannt. Dies gilt auch für die wichtigsten Wettbewerbe: So stellen die Paralympics nur eine Facette von Großereignissen im Behindertensport dar. Tausende Menschen treten bei den Deaflympics an, Menschen mit geistigem Handicap bei den Special Olympics. Die Strukturen weiterer bedeutsamer Bereiche wie etwa des Rehabilitationssports stehen, trotz der einiger jüngst publizierter wissenschaftlicher Forschungen, ebenfalls nur selten im Blickfeld.

Das 9. Symposium Sportpolitik beschäftigt sich vor diesem Hintergrund mit der Entwicklung und den Strukturen der Behindertensportpolitik. Im Rahmen des Symposiums kommen Experten aus der Sportpolitik und der Verbandforschung gemeinsam mit Vertretern aus der sportpolitischen und administrativen Praxis zusammen, um u.a. zu erörtern, welche Politik der Deutsche Behindertensportverband (DBS) betreibt, welche Kooperation mit Bundesministerien verfolgt wird, welche Entwicklungen im internationalen Raum erfolgen und insoweit dem Inklusionsgedanken im Sport Rechnung getragen wird.

Final Workshop National Sports Governance

In November 2018, the final workshop of the overall project took place in Leuven (Belgium), bringing together all project partners, journalists, researchers and other interested parties from Europe and abroad. The participants discussed the results of the final report in lectures and panel discussions. In order to discuss the final results and perspectives with the German partner associations and other interested parties, the Institute for European Sport Development and Leisure Studies invited for another workshop on the 28th November 2018. The aim of this final workshop is to classify and explain the German and European results and to make them available for future good governance activities.

MSE „Promoting and Supporting Good Governance in the European Football Agents Industry“

After fruitful events in London and Madrid, the Cologne meeting reflected the ongoing endeavors on player agents' regulation and analyse the reform perspectives of the FIFA Task Force Transfer System. The thematic focus of this third MSE was placed on "Professional Standards, Licensing and Qualification". This topic has caused much debate in the past. This event was part of the ERASMUS+ research project carried out across member states of the European Union. The project is led by Edge Hill University (represented by Professor Richard Parrish) and the project partners are the Universidad Carlos III Madrid, the University of Umeå in Sweden and the University of Rijeka in Croatia.

3rd. Summer School: „The Dynamics of Change in Sport, Sport Business and Leisure: social, economic, and political perspectives

The summer school is a short-term academic training program for bachelor, master and doctoral students from Chinese (sports) universities or higher education institutions of sports, which integrates academic learning, sports practice, urban excursion and natural exploration as well. Under the mentoring of the highly qualified and proficient staff for teaching and research of the German Sport University Cologne, various fields of sport will be covered: How do students learn (sport) in Europe? How is the educational system working? What about academic research and the sport systems in Germany and Europe? This year 13 students from various Chinese Universities joined the program and successfully passed the final exams.
