

Aims and objectives:

People in Germany love sport. Football in particular is a major part of Germany's sporting identity. Yet, there is much more to sport in Germany than just football. There are uncountable opportunities to get involved in a wide range of activities. The summer school explores and explains how people in Germany and Europe engage in leisure sport. Who participates when and why? And what sustainable change does leisure sport activities actually bring about? The Summer School offers the opportunity to find answers and become familiar with leisure, sport and tourism in Germany. With 60 million tourists a year, Germany is Europe's second most popular holiday destination after Spain. The Summer School addresses academic approaches to leisure studies and tourism. At the same time, it provides general information about sport studies in Germany. In order to obtain a substantial overview the summer-school combines theoretical seminars and practical experiences. The language (literature and discussions) will at all times be English. In some cases additional chinese translation will be provided.
